PIONEER WOMEN OF TEXAS

A Tribute
By DR. JARRETT D. LAW

(Paper read before the annual reunion of the Old Settlers' Association of Bell County, Texas, September 27, 1902.)

You have been told today of the deeds of valor and heroism of the pioneers, their trials, privations, hardships and victories; but I come to play on a minor key. It is pleasant and right to recount the noble deeds of our fathers, but far more pleasant to say something in praise of our gentle sisters, the heroines of the pioneer; she who rocked the cradle bed of childhood; our first, last and faithful friend. We would feel remiss in a chivalric duty did we fail to note her share in the great work of discovery and improvement, and I am proud to record some encouraging word to her aspirations and advocate her claims to a just and proper place in the ranks of the Old Settlers' Association. The trophies of the years that pass are a few immortalities gleaned from its sepulchre. Epochs, events, characters, that survive; oblivion is the common goal of the race. Whatever has contributed to human weal has been remembered, memorialized by cenotaph and mausoleum and remains with us on history's page. Their deeds shine on the pages of history like stars blazing in the night and their achievements have long been celebrated in song and story.

In this latter day, amid the bustle and rush of things, when so many events and characters are crowded on the canvas, and everybody lays claims to reputation, and we scarce know who to honor, it is pleasing to appreciate old settlers' reunion; to turn aside for a little while to do honor to the old men and women who laid the foundation of empire in the great Southwest. Romulus and Remus founded an empire and their names are immortal. Columbus discovered a new world and he stands unique in the sublime faith and courage which impelled him over an unknown sea. Honor has been rather partial in bestowing her gifts, and fame has cast her laurels chiefly on masculine brows, forgetting the countless heroines who were worthy of recognition. Therefore I appreciate the little space of 10 minutes allotted me and the subject assigned me: "The Pioneer Women of Texas." I am proud to say that women have proved themselves competent to fill positions other than presiding at festal boards, or beating out the rhythm of their blood with sandaled feet, on polished floors, or strewing flowers in the path of the conqueror as he returns from the bloody carnage; for many noble names have swollen the list of those who have proved to the world that women can be true and great even in the arduous duties incident to a pioneer life. Bravely she has gone to the unprotected frontier, with no shelter but the crude cabin, the dugout or wigwam, where the winds whistled, wolves howled, where Indians yelled, and yet within that log house with its thatched roof, burning like a lamp was the pure and stainless flame of Christian faith, love, patience, fortitude and heroism. And as the star of the East rested over the rude manger where Christ lay, so speaking, not irreverently, there rested over the roofs of the pioneers a star of the West, the star of empire, and today that empire is the proudest in the world. The pioneer woman, though a creature of toil and loneliness and privation, she endured it with a constancy as changeless as the solitudes and danger about her. She has borne her part in all the vicissitudes incident to the outposts of civilization and her hands have assisted in kindling the fires on the confines of civilization to guide the wheels of empire outward, onward. Of necessity, the pioneer woman sacrifices more than the pioneer man, the finer texture of her being is less adapted to the rugged environment of pioneer life. However as the tides of the ocean are forever faithful to the mysterious attraction of the moon, so woman has followed man across the seas, and over the mountains, into the deserts, to witness his adventures and share his achievements. Those who lay the foundations of empire and extend the outposts of civilization are worthy of all honor, and especially is this true of pioneer women. If Texas today boasts of statesman or warrior, of patriots and freemen, of civilization and a social fabric into which is inwrought the elements of permanency and progress, she owes it largely to her pioneer women, who founded the first homes, worshipped in the first humble chapels erected to God on these western hills and boundless prairies now crowded with temples and churches and schools and institutions of learning, while the multitudinous tramp of a million feet are still heard in the distance coming this way to enjoy what they purchased by their sacrifice and privation. It was not given to many of these leaders to enter into the fruits of their labors. This splendid civilization we enjoy today, the social vines that shelter us, the civic boughs whose clusters feed us, all spring from the seed sown, and the harvest of tears reaped by our pioneers, our old settlers. These pioneer women were familiar with much that has passed with the years, so rapidly have conditions changed. Be it said to their honor that in humble homes and few advantages, she did well her part; there was something in the lullaby that she sang to her children at twilight in the sublime simplicity of her teachings that fostered a sturdy manhood and patriotism which was inwrought into the stalwart republic, the precursor of the Lone Star state. She has been scalped and tortured by the savage, and her blood has reddened these western plains as an oblation on the altar of empire. Their lives and the tragic scenes through which they passed are each a romance where daring and adventure and sacrifice are the chief actors on its eventful pages.

"Within that log house was the pure and stainless flame of Christian faith, love, patience, fortitude and heroism."

These are the women who baptized Texas with the baptism of heroic devotion, these are the women who have made heroes of her men and who have stamped upon them that indescribable impress of dash and dare, of fine physique and grand air, that something which marks a Texan anywhere you meet him, and makes the less impetuous stand in awe of the man from Texas. Texans are justly proud of the mothers of this great state. Their deeds and their memory are worthy to be enshrined in poetry and song.

All that is noblest in man is born of woman's constancy and deathless devotion to him. Knighthood found its inspiration in the pathos of her love and the charm of her smiles. Woman loves man, is jealous of his freedom, his liberty, his honor, and for him she sacrifices all. Heart and soul are the small things she immolates on any altar. The pioneer women of Texas rubbed themselves out in drudgery and toil that their beauty might reappear in the structure their devoted hands built to liberty and progress. They buried themselves in these western solitudes, that from such living sepulchres might come the great pulse beat of a nation, a buoyant, chivalric, progressive civilization.

They gave up the comforts and pleasures of society, severed the tender ties of the human heart, home, and kindred, the old altars where they prayed, the graves of their loved and lost, these the dearest things to woman's heart, was the price they paid, that we today might enjoy in their fullest fruition what they lost. We may well be proud of the temper of these Texas heroines; their dear old hands, it is true, were familiar with toil, but they wrought faithfully and well, and their dear old hearts beat the prelude to the grand march of empire. Their feet beat out the trail over the trackless prairie which has since widened into the great thoroughfares of commerce and travel; her tender hand planted the first flowers on the grave of those whose bones first reposed under Texas soil. If you are with us today, we treasure you as trophies fresh from the field of victory; may your declining years be rewarded with the gratitude and appreciation of all who enjoy the blessings and privileges of this great country; may your last days be as the calm eventide that comes at the end of a quiet summer day when the sun is dying out of the west. We believe and admit it today, that woman is heaven's "ideal of all that is pure and ennobling and lovely here, her love is the light in the cabin home." It is the one thing in the world that is constant, the one peak that rises above all cloud, the one window in which the light forever burns, the one star that darkness can not quench is woman's love. It rises to the greatest height, it sinks to the lowest depths, it forgives the most cruel injuries. It is perennial of life, and grows in every climate, neither coldness nor neglect, harshness nor cruelty can extinguish it. It is the perfume of the heart; it is this that has wrought all miracles of art, that gives us music all the way from the cradle song to the last grand symphony that bears the soul away on the wings of love.

And now in the language of Petronius to Lygia, "May the white wing doves of peace build their nests in the rafters of your homes," may the gleams of happiness and prosperity shine upon the pathway of your remaining years, and may the smile of an approving God be a lamp unto your feet and a light unto your pathway, guiding you safely across the frontier of time to a safe place beneath the shade of the trees on the other side.

Mineral Resources of Texas

COAL AND LIGNITE

By E. H. SELLARDS

Geologist Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas.

In its fuel resources, Texas is fortunate in having, in addition to oil and gas, both coal and lignite. The coal and lignites include the bituminous coal of the Pennsylvanian and Cretaceous formations, and the cannel coal, and the lignite of the Tertiary formations. The coal produced in Texas in 1918 was valued at $5,937,997.

The Bituminous Coal of the Pennsylvanian Formations.

The coals of the Pennsylvanian formations in Texas are found in the north central part of the state, where rocks of this age lie at the surface, over a considerable area. The belt of the Pennsylvanian formations in this part of the state extends from somewhat south of the Colorado river in a northeasterly direction to the Red river. To the west, the belt of Pennsylvanian rock passes under and gives place to the Permian, while to the east it passes under the Cretaceous.

The Pennsylvanian sediments of this area include four series of formations, as follows, beginning with the oldest: Milsap, Strawn, Canyon and Cisco. Coal has been found in commercial quantities in two of these formations, namely, the Strawn and Cisco. The coal of the Strawn is found near the base of that series or possibly at the top of the underlying Milsap. The coal of this formation is worked in Erath and Palo Pinto counties and was formerly mined in Parker county. It is bituminous coal of good quality and is found in a vein which averages from twenty-eight to thirty inches in thickness.

The Strawn formation is succeeded, as stated, by the Canyon, and this in turn by the Cisco. No coal has been found in the Canyon formation, but in the Cisco several seams are found, at least two of which are workable. The uppermost of these two coal seams has been traced at its outcropping margin from McCulloch county, south of the Colorado river, through Coleman, Brown, Callahan, Eastland, Stephens, Young and Jack counties to Bowie in Montague county, a distance of about 250 miles. The seam has a thickness of from twelve to forty-two inches and has been mined more or less in all the counties in which the vein outcrops.

The second coal seam mined in the Cisco formation is much less extensive, having been found only in McCulloch county, south of the Colorado river. Coal is also mined at Bridgeport, in Wise county. This coal was formerly regarded as being a continuation of the vein mined in Erath, Palo Pinto and Parker counties. Subsequent investigations apparently indicate that this coal found near Bridgeport is an independent vein and probably lies within the Cisco formation.

Quality of the Pennsylvanian Bituminous Coal.

The coal mined in Erath and Palo Pinto counties ranks as a good grade bituminous coal. The heating value of an average sample is given as 11,871 B. T. U. per pound. The ash and sulphur, however, are relatively high. The coal from the uppermost vein in the Cisco formation has a somewhat lower fuel value than that from the Strawn. The quality of the coal of the second vein of the Cisco formation referred to is perhaps somewhat better than that of the uppermost vein. All the coal of these formations is bituminous in character.

The Bituminous Coal of the Cretaceous.

The principal deposits of the bituminous coal of the Cretaceous in Texas are found near Eagle Pass in Maverick county. The deposits holding the coal are of late Cretaceous age, and are known as the Eagle Pass formation. The coal bearing series extend from Maverick county southwestward to near Sabinas, Mexico, crossing the Rio Grande a few miles above Eagle Pass. The coal has been mined both in Texas and in Mexico. In this area the dip of the Cretaceous formations is to the southeast, so that the coal beds pass under later formations in that direction.

The coal veins as found in Maverick county vary in thickness from about 3 to 7 feet. When of the maximum thickness, however, the vein is seldom solid coal, but usually includes partings of shale. The average thickness of the coal veins in this area approximates 4 or 5 feet.

Coal is found in the Cretaceous in Brewster county and in the San Carlos basin of Presidio county. It has been reported also at a number of other localities in West Texas. While some mining has been undertaken in the San Carlos basin, production from this area, up to the present time, has been limited.

Cannel Coal.

The deposits of cannel coal that have been mined in Texas are in Webb county. These deposits are said to include probably the largest body of cannel coal of bituminous grade in the United States, if not in the world. It is a low moisture coal, almost as hard as anthracite, is black and glossy and is sold on the unusual guarantee for Tertiary coal of 12,500 B. T. U., and is said to compare favorably with the bituminous coal of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Iowa and Missouri.

These cannel coal mines are located on and near the Rio Grande, about 25 miles northwest of Laredo. The formation holding the cannel coal is of Eocene age, being probably within the Cook Mountain formation.

Extent of the Cannel Coal Field.

The trend of the cannel coal bearing formation north of the Rio Grande is approximately north-south. Exposures of a lignite coal have been recorded 25 miles north of the Rio Grande, on the Nueces river in Zavalla and Uvalde counties. These exposures indicate that a very considerable area is underlain by lignite and cannel coal in the western part of Webb county and in the eastern part of Zavalla and Dimmitt counties, extending into Uvalde county.

The depth at which the coal lies below the surface depends upon the location of the mines. The formations in this part of the state in general dip to the east. This regional dip is modified in places, but in general any particular coal seam or rock layer is found at an increasing depth when followed to the east. In the mines now being operated the coal lies from 50 to 165 feet below the surface. In breaks adjacent the Rio Grande are found actual exposures of the cannel coal beds.

Lignite.

The lignite deposits of Texas are found in a broad belt of country extending from the Red river at the northeast corner of the state in a southwesterly direction to the Rio Grande. The lignite-bearing area as thus defined, extends fully 600 miles in its northeast-southwest trend. Its width is variable but in places exceeds 100 miles. It is not to be assumed that the whole area thus defined is underlain by lignite. The facts are that within this large area there are numerous beds of lignite, each of which is more or less local. In practical development the extent and thickness of each particular lignite bed must be worked out for the locality under consideration.

The formations in which the lignite is found are of Tertiary age, being chiefly or entirely those of the Eocene series. The formations, in which lignite beds are most numerous, include the Wilcox, Yegua, Fayette and Jackson. Of these formations the Wilcox is the oldest and its belt of surface outcropping is found farthest inland. Lignite in the Wilcox formation has been found in Medina, Leon, Bexar, Guadalupe, Caldwell, Bastrop, Milam, Robertson, Henderson, Van Zandt, Smith, Wood, Rains, Upshur, Titus, Cass, Marion, Harrison, Pannola and other counties. The lignite of this formation has been mined in Bexar, Bastrop, Milam, Robertson, Leon, Henderson, Wood, Raines, Hopkins, Titus, Houston and other counties.

The Tertiary formations dip in general towards the east, and the Wilcox formation with its beds of lignite, pass under the later formations. The formations overlying the Wilcox and above the Carrizo or Queen City sands are the Mt. Selman and Cook Mountain. These formations are known to contain some lignite beds, although with the exception of the cannel coal, which may be regarded as altered lignite, they are not notably lignitic. In the next overlying formations the Yegua, Fayette and the Jackson, lignite is found in considerable quantity. This grouping of the lignite beds in the Wilcox formation, on the one hand, and in the much later Yegua, Fayette and Jackson formations, on the other, results in two parallel belts of lignite bearing rocks separated by a more or less barren area. The counties in which lignite of the Yegua, Fayette and Jackson is known, include Gonzales, Fayette, Washington, Burleson, Grimes, Walker, Houston, Trinity, Angelina, San Augustine, Sabine and other counties.

Thickness.

The thickness of lignite veins varies greatly with different deposits and from place to place. From the fact that lignites are formed in shallow water or swamps it follows that no one bed can be expected to have a very great areal extent. Even in the case of very large swamps, such as the Dismal Swamp of Virginia or the Okefinokee Swamp of Georgia, the continuity of an accumulating lignite deposit is likely to be interrupted by occasional elevations or islands. In a lignite-bearing district as extensive as that of Texas, it is not to be expected that a single bed or seam will pass uninterruptedly through the whole area. It is found, in fact, that any given lignite bed is likely to be limited in areal extent. On the other hand, while no one vein continues over large areas, the lignite-bearing formations usually are found to contain successive lignite beds, one above the other. As a rule the Texas lignite veins are from 2 feet or less, to 4 feet in thickness, although some of the veins worked have in places a thickness of 10 feet or more.

The Methods of Mining Lignite and Coal.

In Texas the lignite beds are mined very generally by sinking shafts to the lignite vein. The shafts vary in depth, although most lignite veins mined lie at a depth of less than 100 feet from the surface. Of course increased thickness or desirable quality of the lignite permits mining to an increased depth. After sinking the shaft, which is a vertical opening to the coal seam, lateral tunnels are run following the lignite vein. The lignite is usually worked out by the room and pillar system, rooms being opened up at either side from the main runways. As a rule the overhead, or roof, of the tunnels and rooms must be supported by props made of wood to prevent caving. The cannel coal is mined in much the same way. The bituminous coals are also mined chiefly by underground mining. In some instances, however, these coals are mined by the open pit or "strip method." In this method of mining the overburden is removed down to the coal, which is then taken from the open pits. The strip method is applicable, of course, only when the overburden is slight.

Origin of Coal, Cannel Coal, and Lignite.

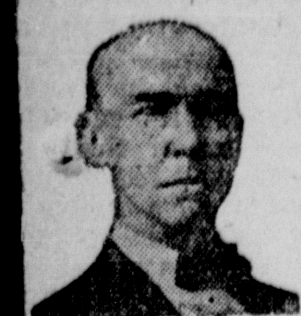

Coal, lignite and peat beds originate in a way that is comparable the one to the other. There are no peat deposits in Texas. Nevertheless in some of the other states, particularly in Florida and in Maine, peat is abundant and its origin a matter of observation. In these peat beds vegetation of some kind, grasses, trees, or sphagnum moss, accumulate under water, and by a process of slow carbonization, form peat. When plants lie in the open air, where they have access to abundant oxygen, they quickly and completely decay by oxidation and there remains only the ash of the plants. On the other hand, where plants lie below water level the oxygen is largely excluded and the plants carbonize to the extent of forming peat, and may later form coal.

In this process it is not material whether the body of water in which the plants are accumulating is a small pond or a large swamp, providing that there is enough water to entirely submerge the accumulating vegetation. In large open lakes with merely a border of vegetation, peat accumulates slowly if at all. On the other hand, in small ponds or sink-hole lakes where the bordering vegetation is dense, peat accumulates rapidly. (Continued on Page 7.)

CURRENT COMMENT

By J. H. LOWRY

DAVY CROCKETT—HERO

Nearly every month of the year marks the birth of some great man—some mortal who by word or deed, or both, gained a lead-pipe cinch on fame, and who, after receiving the applause of the multitudes for a season, passed on, leaving his footprints on the sands of time and his sayings in the mouths of men. To my mind the month of August is the poorest month of the year to be born in. The heat usually plays its fiercest engagement in August, and flies and gnats and mosquitoes are more numerous then than at any other time. I am confident that, after struggling with the hives, flies and mosquitoes for a few days, the babes who discover the world in August readily reach the conclusion that life is a delusion and a snare, yet when we delve into history and biography we find that some great men were born in August. Davy Crockett's earthly existence began on the 17th of August, 136 years ago. Davy Crockett was truly a great man, and to him the world owes much. I was not associated with Davy during his lifetime, but all my life I have been closely associated with the country and the things Davy was associated with, and it is but natural that I should be proud of his greatness and his achievements. The place of my birth is but a few miles from the place of Davy's birth, and this fact, I contend, makes me a close neighbor to fame. We hunted possums and coons in the same woods and caught fish out of the same rivers and creeks. We both came to Texas, and as I write this I can see the spot where Davy spent a whole winter when he was on his way to the Alamo to give his life for Texas and Texans.

Of course things have changed wonderfully since the winter of 1836, when Davy and his men camped in a pretty grove and gave the name of Honey Grove to the spot which is now the site of the pretty little city in which I reside. Davy found many fine bee trees in the grove and feasted on delicious honey all the winter without being out a nickel, but if I get any of the saccharine delights manufactured by the bees I must lay down the cash. Davy also found a fine spring of water, where he slaked his thirst and performed his ablutions without cost, while I must now give up two dollars a month for drinking and bath water. But in spite of the increased cost of living in this immediate vicinity, I am glad to live where Davy once resided, and am also glad that I don't have to live as Davy did. And I sincerely hope I will not have to die as Davy did.

I started out to prove that a great man can be born in August—or rather that a man born in August can become great—and to offer as my proof text the life and work of Davy Crockett, back woodsman of West Tennessee, who finally dimmed the fame of Thermopylae by giving to the world the more glorious picture of the Alamo. But please permit me to pause a minute, as I look out upon the spot where Davy and his companions camped during the winter of 1836, and note just a few of the changes that have come over the country since then. The wigwags of the Comanche Indians were then scattered over the prairies of northern Texas; these have given place to walls of brick and stone that mark the sites of many pretty towns and cities. Where there were wigwags there are great marts of trade, where there were war dances there are great temples of peace; where there were war whoops there are deep-toned organs that call the people to prayer and praise. At night Davy's slumbers were disturbed by the dismal howls of the coyote, while now a fellow may sleep fairly well save for the whistle of that fleet-winged bearer of commerce, the railroad train, and the horns and exhaust pipes of the automobiles, which run all night in most sections. The trails that the hunters then followed are now covered by highways of steel that pay a large percentage of the state's taxes and are cursed by all the politicians every election year, and around which most of our industrial disturbances cluster. Davy feared the Indian and the catamount. These dangers have vanished, but we of the present day are not left without something to excite our fears. Sometimes we fear capital will starve us to death, and when we get over that we fear labor strikes will bankrupt the country and lead to revolution. Great herds of buffaloes then roamed the plains; we have a gentler, unhumped kine now and boast of the pedigree Durhams and Jerseys that make a new world's record every few months. Davy traveled many weeks between the spot on which I now gaze and San Antonio; it's a twelve-hour journey now by rail and a three-hour journey by airship. And yet only eighty-six years have passed since Davy Crockett and his companions broke camp in Honey Grove, Texas, hitched the ponies and the mules to the lizards and pulled out for San Antonio to help the outnumbered Texans win their fight against the cruel greasers. Truly it was a path of glory that Davy Crockett traveled, but a path that led to the grave. For eighty-six years the bones of Davy Crockett have been resting in Mother Earth, but for Davy, as for all grand, lofty souls who live and toil that virtue and truth may rule the universe, there is endless youth. With the blest he is resting, but the sacred soil of our great commonwealth bows, and will ever bow, in reverent love about his dust.

Yes, Davy Crockett was a great man, though born in August. My father knew Davy, and believed him one of the greatest men of his age. I have heard my father talk much of a new way Davy devised to catch coons. Coons were the bane of that section then, just as the boll weevil is the old-man-of-the-sea to North Texans now, and he who devised a plan to catch two coons where only one coon was caught before was truly a benefactor of his race. Coons were eating the corn, and corn was meat and drink to the pioneers of West Tennessee. In my visits back to the old state I have tried to talk with the old settlers about the glory of Crockett's fight and death at the Alamo, but they always turn from the scene of blood and death to the creek bottom country of West Tennessee, where Davy taught the people a better way to catch coons. He made a better coon trap than any other man, and so long as there are coons to destroy corn and fight dogs, Davy Crockett will live in the hearts of men who raise corn and own dogs. And my father, when a boy, heard Davy speak, when the latter was a candidate for Congress. I don't know the name of the man who ran against Davy; I doubt very much whether my father knew. If he did know he never deemed it worth while to mention the name of Davy's opponent, though he had much to say about the campaign and Davy's speech. Venturing a guess at something of which I know nothing, I would say Davy's opponent was a smooth-looking chap who wore a white shirt. I have an idea that in his speeches he had considerable to say about the tariff and state's rights, reaching his peroration when he blistered the plutocratic owners of the turnpikes for making charges too heavy at the toll gates. Then Davy ascended the platform, threw aside his coonskin cap and told about his coon trap—and the crowd went wild and gave Davy the solid vote of the precinct.

No matter what the viewpoint, Davy Crockett was a great man. If coons were to be destroyed he found "the more excellent way." He wasn't willing to follow the beaten path of sacrificing the country's best dogs in order to kill a few coons. His was a pioneer soul that blazed new paths where highways never ran. But let us look a little at Davy as a patriot—as a fighting man, if you please. While Davy and his party were encamped at Honey Grove during the winter of 1836 many stories calculated to frighten people reached them. They were told of the wild Indians that lined the trail and preyed upon the almost helpless travelers. They were told also of the big rivers, and the trackless, muddy bottoms through which they would have to pass, and of the scarcity of food along the way. The stories were not without effect. The timid ones of the party trembled with fear and turned back; but Davy and a few followers pressed on. They had caught a vision of the suffering Texans, and they had determined that the Texans must be free. They fought off the Indians, they waded the rivers and the mud, and they arrived in time to thin the ranks of the greasers, and then—to die! Of the timid souls who turned back we have heard no more. Like Orpah, the Moabitess, they lost their place in history when they turned back. The old county back in Tennessee bears Crockett's name, and the name of the county site was changed from "Cageville" to Alamo, in honor of Davy's fight and death. In Honey Grove there is Crockett park and Crockett school, and to every visitor to the town the spot is pointed out where Crockett camped. But of the timid souls who turned back history is silent. Nobody knows in what month they were born, and nobody cares. For them no orator weaves rhetorical immortelles, and for them no minstrel song shall swell.

And Davy Crockett was as great in wisdom of conduct and preachment as he was in inventive genius or on the field of battle. He gave to the world the great proverb, "Be sure you are right and then go ahead." You will find nothing finer even in Ecclesiastes. Solomon, though endowed with wisdom from on high, has nothing greater to his credit. Not a great many of us have heeded Davy's splendid admonition. Many of us have come to grief by going ahead without first making sure we were right, and others of us have stagnated by refusing to go ahead after making sure we were right, but the few who have made Davy's axiom the rule of their conduct are riding in Cadillacs and wearing diamonds here, and will wear crowns and play harps in the world to come. Yes, a man can be great though born in August—great in intellect, great in spirit and great in counsel.

DECADENCE OF DEMOCRATIC CONVENTIONS.

The time for holding the State Democratic convention is at hand, and when I think what the convention will be my heart fills with sadness. I have seen Democratic conventions that were worthy of the great party of Jackson and Jefferson—conventions that were worth going across the state many times to see and hear—conventions that thrilled the Democratic soul and loosened the Democratic tongue, and stirred patriotism to the highest pitch. I shall not attend the Democratic convention this year. If I should do so I am sure I would feel, when the insipid routine started up, about as the good old Jews felt when they began to rebuild the temple after the return from Babylon. The venerable Israelites could find no joy in rebuilding their Father's house because the new structure was to be such a shoddy affair when compared to the glorious temple erected when Solomon wielded the sceptre. Democratic conventions of today are not fired by the spirit and glory of contest. They do not nominate candidates. They are mere returning boards that cast up returns which have already been published and declare results that are already known. It is really pitiful to watch the gyrations of the chairman as he paws the air and melts his collar with perspiration, trying in vain to arouse enthusiasm. Even more pitiful is it when some fellow takes the stand to place in nomination a candidate who has already been nominated. Before the poor orator reaches his peroration, before he gets to the place where he majestically raises his hand and urges his voice to its most sonorous pitch to say, "And so I present to the untimely democracy of this grand old commonwealth a m-a-n"—y-e-a, before he reaches the place where he is to electrify his hearers and turn the convention into a prolonged shout by the mention of the name of his hero, most of the delegates have slipped out and are telling mournful stories around the bevo stands and in the ice cream parlors. And even when the hero arises to accept the nomination a faint handclap from the faithful few is all the ovation the grand old party will give. How are the mighty fallen! Sad, indeed, must be the noble jackass, proud emblem of Democracy, as he looks upon the proceedings of a once hilarious party.

But the grand old party has had some wonderful convocations in the bright days of the past. Think of 1892, when the mighty hosts gathered at San Antonio, and when many officers were necessary to keep the Hogg forces and the Clark forces from settling the contest with guns and knives. Think of the gathering at Houston, when the old commoner, Jim Hogg, cussed out the "lock-jawed judge." Think of the time at Dallas, when glorious old John H. Reagan, and handsome young Charley Culbertson, and the great orator, Sam Lanham, were candidates for Governor. Five thousand people sat up until 2 o'clock in the morning to hear the silver-tongued orators, Aldredge, Crawford, Russell and Wynne debate the free silver question. The last great Democratic convention was held at Dallas when Tom Campbell was nominated for Governor. And it was a real convention. Many men were called liars, a few noses were skinned, and fully one hundred men spoke at the same time in the convention hall, out on the grounds, and from the steps of the hotels. Well do I remember seeing an eloquent orator pour out his Democratic eloquence while standing on a soap box on the grounds, and well do I remember seeing a hilarious Democrat kick the soap box out from under the speaker, letting the latter fall sprawling on the grass. The siege of Lucknow played the leading role in the great contest and the "Campbells came" at the call of Joe Bailey. Compared to scenes like these, how dull and insipid are the Democratic conventions of today, with nothing more exciting than the opening prayer and the report of the committee on credentials.

An Encounter in the Egyptian Pyramid

By J. OSWALDSON

A strange feeling of awe came over us as we approached these wonders of the world.

It was a good many years ago, and yet it is as fresh in my memory as if it was only yesterday. I was a young man then, and full of pluck, which served me many a good turn in those years of travel.

In those days there were no steamers on the Nile to take excursionists up to the Cataracts. We had our own dahabieh, or Nile boat, and were in no hurry, and so had time to explore whatever objects of interest awakened our curiosity.

We had sailed up to Cairo from Alexandria, some 150 miles, and our yacht was moored at Boulac, the river port. Of course, to us the climax of interest at Cairo was to cross the river and visit the Egyptian Pyramids in the desert, on the opposite bank.

It was a bright and lovely morning, just such a morning as you can reckon upon in that strange land for three months together; so, after breakfast, we started, my friend Lawrence and I.

We crossed the Nile in a ferryboat and engaged Jerusalem steeds—stout, clever little Egyptian donkeys—and were pioneered by our lithe, half-clad and noisy companions across the three miles of desert, until we came up to the gigantic monuments of such interest.

A strange feeling of awe came over us as we approached these wonders of the world. There they stood, in all their solid, gigantic masonry, as they had stood for 40 centuries, and as they bid fair to stand until the world shall come to an end.

We recalled Napoleon's famous appeal to his troops, when he said that "Twenty centuries looked down upon them from the top of those Pyramids." We lingered a little around that mystery of the ages, the Sphinx—which was then only half excavated—and which seems to gaze upon you with its stony eyes, as if questioning your right to invade its realm of mystery.

At length we came up to the Great Pyramid of Cheops—the pyramid of deepest interest. Our curiosity waxed warmer as we realized that it took 100,000 men 50 years to build it.

King Cheops reigned 50 years and the great life work of a king, at that period of Egypt's history, was to build and beautify his tomb; and, at that date, a king's tomb was a pyramid and that custom lasted from the Fourth to the Twelfth Dynasty. After that the kings were buried either at Abydos or at Thebes, or at other places—chiefly in caverns, found or excavated in the hills.

The question uppermost with us was: "What could be the object of building these immense and majestic structures?" and the ready answer came—it was their estimation of the value of the soul, or intelligent mind, within.

They thought the soul lived on in happiness, just as long as the body remained undissolved and, therefore, by first embalming the body and then placing it in a mummy case, then in a stone sarcophagus, and then entombing it in these substantial pyramid structures, they felt they were doing all in their power to ensure the future existence and well-being of the soul within them.

We cannot but respect their motive, while we pity their misguided zeal, and pity far more the thousands of victims who spent and lost their lives in rearing these marvelous edifices. There might be other motives for building them, but these we shall not stop to discuss.

And now we came to the narrow and low entrance to this Great Pyramid. Two half-clad, wild-looking Arabs presented themselves as our guides into the dark recesses of this mysterious structure. We made our bargain with them; their "baksheesh," (money) was to be so much. To this they agreed. So my companion, Lawrence, and I entered the dark door, our guides going before with a lighted torch.

We descended a sloping passage, very narrow, which led to the original sepulchral chamber, cut deep in the living rock; but after a few moments we halted and turned up another narrow corridor at an angle of some 26 degrees, and leading to a horizontal row, which led to the original sepulchral chamber.

But, stopping again, we commenced an ascent by another passage toward the king's chamber, built in the very center of the pyramid. It was a strangely constructed ascent by steps cut in the stone blocks, forming two stone ladders, with two feet between them, obliging us to step across what seemed a deep, narrow ravine, until we reached the entrance to the king's sepulchral chamber. The entrance was by a doorway, low and narrow, just like a fireplace, so that we had to stoop and squeeze our way into the chamber.

Our Arab guides held the torches, which threw but a gloomy light into the stone-walled room. It was 17 feet by 34, and 19 feet high; at the side of it was the granite or porphyry coffer, or sarcophagus, once occupied by the mummy of King Cheops.

We found the lid thrown back and the place empty, some saying that its contents were rifled by the Persian conqueror, Cambyse; others, that Belzoni, employed by the English government, robbed it of its mummy, and brought the embalmed king to be preserved in the British Museum; although some consider this a mistake, as it was the mummy of Menkara, builder of the third pyramid, that Belzoni brought to the museum.

After inspecting the chamber, with its inscriptions scratched on the walls and on the sarcophagus, I said to Lawrence:

"I'll fire my pistol, to catch the deafening reverberations, which I have heard are as loud as thunder."

So, without regard to the Arabs, who squatted one on each side of the narrow doorway, I fired, much to the alarm of the natives, who shrieked and uttered what might be a prayer to Allah. But they soon recovered self-possession as they saw us preparing to descend.

I led the way, and on stooping to enter the low doorway, all of a sudden I was stopped by the firm grasp of one of the Arabs at my coat-collar, calling out, "A guinea! a guinea!" which I soon found to mean that unless we paid a guinea (a term denoting a large, indefinite sum of money), we should not visit the daylight again.

Here we were in this dark chamber in the heart of the Great Pyramid, not knowing our way out of the labyrinth, and in the power of these practiced villains. But there was no time for debate or hesitation. I saw that pluck alone could deliberate us from our peril, and I knew that at heart these Arab desperadoes were cowards; so, mustering all my courage and my strength, I threw myself upon the villain, seizing him by the throat, and thrusting the muzzle of my unloaded pistol into his ear.

As I pressed his head on the ground, I uttered in broken Arabic and grand English phrases all sorts of dreadful vengeance if he dared to harm us. The rascal pleaded for mercy, begged and prayed I would not shoot him, asked pardon and promised he would never do so no more.

After a minute or two of suspense I liberated him from his supposed perilous position, and I threatened him with condign punishment at the hands of the administrator of the bastinado.

In a moment the man darted through the narrow doorway, glided down the dark shaft, and was out in the desert and far away in a trice beyond possibility of capture, as he ran for his very life.

His companion turned state's evidence, and although no doubt in heart an accomplice, he began abusing his comrade, saying all the bad things he could against him. After lecturing this pretended saintly apologist, and having given him his share of the promised "baksheesh," we dismissed him with a warning, telling him we would call the consul's attention to the matter, which would perhaps prevent a repetition of such an offense in the future.

We did not stay long enough at Cairo to know if the machinery of the law was set in motion to catch and punish the culprit, but on another occasion some friends of ours at Thebes followed up a similar case of molestation on the part of some of a tribe of Arabs, and they were captured and taken six miles down the river, and after trial, were convicted and sentenced to be bastinadoed; and as in those Eastern lands punishment is generally inflicted without mercy, I've no doubt they were made to smart finely for their offense against "Frankish" travelers, as all tourists from Europe are called.

Such was our encounter in the Great Pyramid. It was exciting enough at the time and might have been serious in its results; but in this as in so many cases in life, all's well that ends well.

The hawks in this country follow close in the tracks of a railroad train, and fly near the ground. Small birds along the line, startled by the roar of the train, fly up in considerable numbers. In their fright they do not see the hawk, and before they get away he has replenished his larder.

MILAM COUNTY TO HAVE RAPID OIL DEVELOPMENT

SHARP DEEP TEST ATTRACTS WIDE ATTENTION OVER STATE.

The Milam county fields are teeming with activity this week, oil operators are coming in daily, and numerous scouts and geologists are working in the field. Many of the old time pioneer oil men are coming back to look over the prospects, being lured here by the development that is going on in the territory.

The feature of the past week in the wildcat area, is the erecting of an 84 foot standard derrick in the vicinity of Sharp, north of Alligator creek, 15 miles southwest of Cameron, for the drilling of a deep test well to the Edwards lime stone. A large oil well supply cable tool rig is being hauled to location, buildings are being erected for the drilling crews and everything is being placed in readiness for the spudding in of this well. The operations are under the management of A. L. Ballard. The location of the well is on the left of the Sharp-Tracey road, about one and one-half miles south of the 1400 foot test drilled last year, near Sharp.

The S. A. Guiberson, Jr., number one Posey, six miles southeast of this city are pulling casing out of the hole preparing to drill to the Edwards limestone. It is reported that the drillers are having trouble in pulling the casing which is froze in the well. The well is attracting a world of attention, and leases are in demand in Dallas and Fort Worth around the location.

The Owens Petroleum Company, number 8 Henry was spudded in, and the drillers are ready to set surface casing. Number 9-10-11 and 12 are locations and will be drilled as soon as possible. Another test that is attracting the oil clan is the semi-deep well being drilled by the Lee Oil Co., on the Niehous tract in the shallow field. The location for this well was made near the 11, Niehous, which came in for better than 50 barrels last week. A sand at 1600 to 1800 feet is looked for which will yield large production. The Bynum Association number three well is a gasser. The well was an offset to the Lee Oil Co., number 11 Niehous, and was drilled to around the 850 foot level. The Tidal Oil Company's number 7 Rountree, is a 15 barrel well at 700 feet.

The Texas Petroleum Development Company, number 4 well is drilling around 400 feet on the Holtzclaw tract. Caudle and Gordon on the Florence Gilliland are drilling on number two.

The pipe line runs for the shallow field are 400 barrels daily. The Lee Oil Company being the largest producer of crude in the field averaging around 135 daily from 11 wells. The Owens Refinery at Minerva is running all the crude, the products finding a ready market locally.

Many wells will be started before the winter sets in and thousands of acres are being blocked up for the drilling of deep tests.

American Legion Spurns Anti-Klan Resolution

Waco, Texas, Sept. 11.—There was no fight over the Ku Klux Klan in the American Legion of Texas.

Up to 3 o'clock this afternoon it was feared a fight would develop over an effort to have the State Convention of the Legion endorse a resolution condemning the Klan, but at that hour the delegates, by almost unanimous vote, decided that all resolutions must be presented to the resolutions committee before being presented to the convention.

Lieut. Jeff D. Hefley, Jr., of Cameron, who had prepared the resolution, then found such opposition in the committee that he quickly withdrew it, announcing that Maj. Dallas Matthews was its chief opponent.

The resolution of Hefley's was similar to that introduced at the State Democratic Convention in San Antonio a few days ago.

The Legion took another important action this afternoon when it approved a move proposed by Royal R. Atkins of Dallas, adjutant, have the State Legislature, at its next session pass a law requiring that only such teachers shall be employed in Texas public and private schools and universities who are native American citizens, or who have taken out citizenship papers.

This law, if put through as the legion seeks, will also require the teaching of American history and civil government in all schools, both public and private; will require the teaching of the English language; will require the discharge of any teacher guilty of disloyalty, or who criticizes the American flag or system of government, and will require that the certificate of a teacher so guilty shall be revoked.

Watkins suggested other laws for the benefit of exservice men, and George C. Pearl of Dallas, recently elected to the Legislature, announced that he would introduce every measure named.—Forth Worth Star Telegram.

Anti-Ku Klux Klan resolution prepared by Jeff D. Hefley of Cameron, and submitted to the resolutions committee of the Legion convention were withdrawn by him Monday afternoon after the adoption of a motion offered by R. G. Storey, assistant adjutant general, of Austin, that the convention should not consider any resolutions offered on the floor of the convention unless they had previously been acted on by the resolutions committee. Mr. Hefley said he would prefer to withdraw the resolutions rather than have them smothered by the committee.—Waco Times-Herald.

SAVE, O SAVE THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY An Editorial

The Lord be praised. The Texas Democracy, after all, will not be permitted to perish. Just at the moment when all seemed black with despair, the life-savers appeared, and they have called to the Whosoever will to rescue the old ship from impending wreck.

Presumptively, the 600,000 who participated in the primaries with tickets bearing the legend, "I pledge myself to support the nominees of this primary election"—all honorable men and women, whose word is as good as their bond—have been careless, and the unselfish tremblers for constitutional liberty now come to the rescue.

And they will meet in Dallas Saturday to sound a clarion call for the salvation of the party.

Among the signers of the call are several who know the party is in a bad way, because they were candidates for office in the recent primary and had their little political tails twisted nearly thirty years ago by leaving it and uniting with the organization of which the late Wright Cuney was the head.

Then, it is observed, that one of the signers, whose democracy has jelled to the point where it quivers for the constitution nicely, is a lovable old Pop, who, having fruitlessly denounced the democracy in other days, came in and got to congress and found the old thing all right so long as he held office. When he got out of office the party went wrong and the constitution became duly imperilled once more.

Then there is the name of another good soul on the list who has always feared for the safety of the Republic and the integrity of the party. Once he became so alarmed that he ran for governor of Texas on the socialist-labor ticket.

It need not be doubted that Jim will be on hand—Jim who wanted to wreck the old craft two years ago. Jim found that the old hulk floated in spite of all he could do, so he climbed in and tried to get command, but having failed in that, probably he can manage to lay aside his primary pledge and become a member of the salvage crew, if—

And, of course, a great deal of help is needed, there being so many honor-bound and law-bound members in the 600,000 who can not participate. Well, when it comes to saving the democracy by defeating the party ticket named in a concave numbering 600,000, off course there'll be help, especially if there are full "bar's" and any number of bungstarters handy.

Mr. Creager says he will have his republicans on hand ready to help save the democracy. They were mustered to save the democracy thirty years ago when James Stephen Hogg was renominated.

Then there are the old pops and socialists, always to be depended upon. The American partys of two years ago—you can count on them.

There also is old John Barleycorn, working under all flags, but principally the black—depend upon him. If the salvation movement will just choose a beerleg for its figurehead and a pair of old bootlegs for its signal code, John will be right there with the goods.

And don't forget the negroes. They are usually indifferent in politics, but if it's a matter of saving the democracy—well, that's different. They'll be there.

Oh, there are others, but they will not be visible. They will sit by the charts and send their orders by careful couriers.

It is a delightful prospect for the autumn days, when this salvation band proceeds to save the democracy of Texas—the democratic party which sent its 600,000 to the polls in July and August to select its standard bearers.

It is a beautiful and noble spectacle—noble for its personnel, noble for the elements which will be co-ordinated into a life-saving crew for the party. All the more noble, because they saw the need even when there was no call for help, and rallied when the bruises of war; rallied when the callous-natured sinners of democracy scorn the proffered succor.

Oh, well; why not have a little fun as the wretched old world wags along?

Noble call—"To the Democratic Voters of Texas"—and answering it republicans of various hues, socialists, populists, liquorists, hyphenates and those invisibles who speak with the tongues of other men, if not with the tongues of angels. Saving the Democratic party? Fine business!—Houston Post.

Last Friday evening from 8 to 11 Hooks Slocumb entertained about fifty of his friends. At eight o'clock the guests began to arrive. The boys were invited into a room and a big red nose placed on each boy's face. It is useless to say the boys were a scream when they formed a receiving line for the little girls, which also had been given dainty caps to match their pretty party frocks. Two hours of merry games and contests followed. Then Mrs. Slocumb assisted by Mrs. N. H. Butts and Miss Lucile Butts invited them into the dining room and served cake and cream, and on each plate a dainty cigarette much to the delight of the boys but on close inspection the cigarettes turned out to be whistles which added much merriment to the party. The shot, eleven of which have not been removed, hit the doctor about the legs, face and hands.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Pope Sapp who sat beside the doctor, escaped unhurt.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

BY F. W. KAZMEIER.

The majority of people in the poultry business are in it for the money to be made. The few that are keeping chickens for pleasure, in these days and times are far between and few in number. It is also true that the past few years hundreds of people have started in the poultry business to make a living for themselves and family. These people are in earnest, many have spent their last dollar, and if the chickens fail them the question of making a living at once becomes very serious.

There may still be a few doubting Thomases that do not believe it possible to make a living and a good one from chickens alone. We know of no way of convincing them. Neither do we see a good reason why we should make any efforts to convince them.

We have been fortunate enough to enjoy traveling over a greater part of the United States; we have always made an effort to observe closely people that were making their entire living from chickens. We can truthfully say that we found thousands of people in every State that were quietly making their sole living from a flock of chickens. We have seen exceptional cases where a flock of 200 hens were made to produce the entire living for a family of five. We have noticed many flocks of 500 hens producing a good living and laying up a bank account on the side. Just what is the right size flock appears to be hard to say. We find it depends upon the man or woman behind the gun or carrying the feed pail. As a general rule, however, we find too many trying to make too small a flock of chickens to do the work. It is a mistake to expect a few hundred hens to furnish an income sufficient for a family. Keep more chickens and make a better living, is good advice. One man can very nicely take care of 1000 hens.

Our object, however, in this article is not to get people to think that it is only a question of keeping the desired number chickens. Far from it, we wish to leave an entirely different impression; and that is that economic production is necessary to insure success. Economic production only is possible when poultry culling is practiced continually from the time the chicks are hatched until they are old enough to be killed. Right here we might say, that chickens pass the period of usefulness much quicker than most people suspect. Some people keep the hens until they die of old age, and then wonder why they do not get more eggs. They seem to think that a hen four years old will lay as many eggs as the hen one year old. This is of course far from actual facts. The older the hen the less she lays. No way of getting around this. It seldom pays to keep hens longer than three years, especially is this true in the case of the large and medium weight breeds. The first year the pullets return the most economical egg production. As a 2-year-old hen she is still profitable, after that she enters the questionable class. We have found it to our advantage to start culling with the eggs before they enter the incubators. No eggs are set that are over five days old. No deformed, ill-shaped, too small or too large eggs are set.

When the chicks are hatched we cull again. We do not help any out of the shell, although this past year we have hatched over 50,000 chickens. All weak or deformed chicks should be disposed of as soon as hatched. We have found it a waste of money to put a cent's worth of feed or time on them. All slow maturing and runt chickens should be culled as soon as marketable. Look close and you will find a few of these in your flocks. Get rid of them. Maybe you have a few that do not seem to be able to grow a coat of feathers. They are half naked on the yards. Don't wonder at the cause of this seemingly odd incident, simply rout the individual to the soup bowl, which should be easy since there won't be many feathers to pick.

In selecting your breeding stock remember that the male bird is one-half of the flock. For this reason make sure that he is a top-notch from the standpoint of pep and vigor. A good male bird to select is one that starts to crowing at about eight weeks of age, that is well feathered, wattle, and in other respects shows that he is full of vigor and health. A poor male bird is one that does not start to crow until about four or five months old, is smaller and stunted, poorly feathered and developed and in other ways clearly indicates a runt or inferior bird. In the male bird early maturing and feathering is a positive indication of health and vigor. We do not think there is anything that is more important than vigor and health. Not if you are interested in making money from chickens.

In selecting the pullets we have found that the early maturing pullets are by far the best producers, even though they do not in the end attain the size they should. The pullets that feather out rapidly, and start to laying early are the best ones to leg-band so the next year they may go into the breeding pen, if in the meantime no weaknesses crop out. The pullets with two good strong legs set well apart, are much better than those with two good strong legs set closely together. The same applies to a cockerel or cock. The eye is one of the greatest indications of a bird's makeup. The bird with a large, bright, clear and active eye is much superior to the individual with a small, shrunken, listless eye. The eye is the mirror of the makeup of the chicken.

We have not found it best to use pullets for breeders. When it is necessary to use them, it is usually best to mate them with cock birds. The cock bird gives size to the off-spring which is often lacking in pullets. Be sure the cock bird is not too old. It is better that he be no more than two years old. Old male birds and weak male birds are directly responsible for a large number of dead chicks and weak germs in the eggs at hatching time.

To bring out the importance of selecting good producers, it may be well to caution beginners of this fact: It is possible to feed eggs out of a chicken, but it is necessary to first breed the eggs into the chicken. Like you breed speed into a horse so you breed eggs into a chicken. The sooner some people can get this into their heads the less patent egg feeders they will buy and feed to the chickens.

Remember that no two chickens are alike, some are good layers, some are medium good layers and many are poor layers. Although this is true, many people still think that one chicken is as good as another. We know of individuals that build a new hen house, plan it well, and then when it comes to placing the hens inside they go out and pick up anything with feathers that looks like chickens. Such practice is much more common than we like to admit. In these days of close competition, the successful poultry man culls and culls all the time. That is the best way that we know of putting it. Cull, cull and keep on culling.

Too many Texas hens do not produce enough to be self supporting. Too many Texas hens do not lay enough eggs to pay for the feed they eat. This is especially true in the case where mongrel or mixed fowls are kept. In this connection we are pleased to quote from a woman in Denton county, who from 700 hens cleared exactly $3,499.80 in one year. Here is what she said: "Had I started with mongrel laid out hens like many of the farm women are forced to do, I, too, would have made a complete failure."

In culling or selecting remember that the individual is more important than the breed. There are good and poor layers in all breeds. For this reason culling is the key to successful poultry keeping in all breeds. Isolate the exceptionally good one, and place her in the breeding pen, and hatch all of her eggs. That is selection, and making progress.

Standard bred breeds are much more profitable than mongrel fowls.

To show you how much difference there is in individuals, and how important culling is, read the following: A 240-egg hen delayed molting until the middle of September. She molted rapidly and started to laying again in January. A 15-egg hen started molting in July, and molted slowly. Did not start to laying again until March, and then laid only a scattering few eggs. Both hens are housed and fed the same way. They are out of the same feed pail and laid in the same nest. Both were of the same breed, but of different breeding.

This should show it is in the breeding. By culling you can locate the poor layers and keep them out of the breeding pen, and at least not raise any more like her.

The 240-egg hen has bright eyes, narrow skull, smooth face, free from wrinkles, and a well developed waxy comb. Her head shows intelligence. She molted late and quickly. She did not waste much time being broody. Her shanks, she was a white leghorn, were matted, pale and bleached, her feather at this time of the year are dirty, and worn. She is still laying. She is hungry, healthy, alert and of a nervous disposition.

The 15-egg hen is also a white leghorn, she is of a lazy disposition, she has dull, sunken and listless eyes, her face is covered with wrinkles. Her comb has a dry meaty appearance. She molted in July. She stopped laying in April, and did not lay the entire Summer and Winter. Her shanks were bright yellow in color. At this time she has a complete new coat of feathers, bright and clean. She does not look like a worker, but more like an I. W. W.

MEAN OLD MEASLES

"What is this? What is this? Well, this makes me too mad!"

"It Does Make Me Mad."

"What is the trouble, Peter Gnome?" asked Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes.

"I've just heard that Mean Old Measles has gone to pay a visit upon lovely Lucy. You've heard me speak of Lucy, Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes, haven't you?"

"The little girl you love so much? The one with the blue eyes and the fair, fair hair and the soft pretty skin and the gay happy voice?"

"The very one," said Peter Gnome. "Well, Mean Old Measles is visiting Lucy. And Measles just went there on the sly, no one knows how! Measles acts the way all that sly family do."

"Chicken-Pox and the others are just the same way. They all have the same family ways. But, you know I think Measles just might have left Lucy alone. You know it wasn't so very, very long ago since those wretched Tonsil Twins were in Lucy's throat. They were forced to leave. Oh, yes, they were done away with, I'm thankful to say. But they were mean, too, and they didn't leave easily and quietly and without a sound. They simply had to be yanked out."

"And then along came Measles. Yes, Measles spoilt everything. But did Measles care? No, Measles didn't care in the least. Measles took along that mean friend Carrie Cough, and then Measles took along all the little Measles. They're such mean little creatures—nothing more nor less than mean little red spots, are they? "And it seems they started right in to play games right over Lucy's face and body, and they ran races and they played house. Do you know how they play house among Measles' children?"

"I've no idea," said Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes.

"They call it the game of rash instead of house, and their one idea is to take up all the room they can and spread out all they can and in some parts they have make-believe open fires and in other parts they put down rugs that makes the poor person who has the measles want to scratch these parts!"

"And the make-believe open fire-places of the Measles' children feel just like a horrid Measles heat would feel. Doctors call it the fever that comes with Mean Old Measles. And all of these are visiting Lucy."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes. "I'll dash over to Fairy Wondrous Secrets. Together we'll do up a little package. When Mean Old Measles gets under way we can't get rid of her entirely right off, but we can make things a whole lot better."

"As you say, Measles is very sly."

So sly that it is almost impossible to see her on her way. I have to get Fairy Wondrous Secrets to help me, for my work has never happened to be near Mean Old Measles and I don't know her ways. Fairy Wondrous Secrets does. Wait, Peter Gnome! I'll not be long."

In a few moments Fairy Grant-Your-Wishes was back, and Fairy Wondrous Secrets was with her.

"Take this little package," they said together, as they waved their wands, "and put on your invisible robe. Dash into the room where Lucy is and open this package upon her forehead. She will think it is nothing more than a small breeze of refreshing, cool air on her hot forehead."

"But it will be different. It will do its work. You shall see."

Off went Peter Gnome and after he had emptied the package upon Lucy's forehead and had heard her say, "Oh, my forehead feels cool and nice now," he waited around for a little.

It was not long after that the doctor came, and oh, how little Peter Gnome's heart did dance with joy under his invisible robe when he heard the doctor say,

"The worst of it is all over with now. She will now go along the Getting-well-Road which all who are sick so enjoy to travel. The change for the better has just begun."

2. Produce satisfactory evidence that he is personally responsible for the application of at least two constructive safety first principles in his own home.

3. Name the most serious violation of public safety principles which has come under his observation, and produce satisfactory evidence that he has done all within his power to correct the same.

SOCIETY and Club

By MRS. W. A. GILLON

EVERS-COLEMAN.

Last Thursday evening at 6 o'clock the marriage of Miss Estelle Coleman and Mr. Earl Evers was solemnized in the Baptist church of this city, Rev. Henry McFadyen officiating. The church had been beautifully and artistically decorated with ferns, queens wreath, and zinnias. The seats for the family and special friends were set apart by pink, maline bows.

Just before the bridal party arrived, Mrs. Alex Triggs, Mrs. J. E. Watts and Mr. Paul Medsker took their places and rendered the following program:

Violin Solo—Cavatina (Roff) Mr. Medsker.

Vocal Solo—Because, Mrs. Alex Triggs.

To the music of Sohengin's Wedding March, played by Mrs. J. E. Watts, the bridal party entered as follows: Rev. McFadyen, from the pastor's study; the ushers, Mr. Jim Coleman and Mr. Leroy Hamilton, down each aisle; the ring-bearer, little Miss Geraldine Medsker, dressed in a dainty little pink georgette dress and carrying the ring in a pink lily; the groom, on the arm of the best man, his brother, Mr. Rudolph Evers, from the pastor's study; the bride, on the arm of the maid of honor, her sister, Miss Sallie Coleman.

The bride and the groom met at the altar and during soft sweet music, the marriage vows were taken. The ring ceremony was very impressive and beautiful. After the two had been pronounced one, they passed out of the church while Mrs. Watts played Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

A host of friends followed the couple to the station and showered them with rice until they had boarded the train for Waco, Dallas, Houston, and other points.

Just as the train pulled out, the bride threw her bouquet into the crowd; Miss Inez Friday caught it.

The bride wore a handsome dark blue tricot coat suit with grey accessories, and pink roses and purple astors with a ribbon shower.

The maid of honor wore a sponge colored lace and canton afternoon gown, with shoes and picture hat to match, and carried a bouquet similar in style to that of the bride.

Mesdames Triggs and Watts were handsomely gowned and wore corsage bouquets of pink roses and astors.

Mr. Evers is a young business man of Cuero. He is a man highly esteemed by his townsmen and friends.

Mrs. Evers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coleman, of this city—a young lady of culture and talent. She was a graduate of the high school here and of Baylor University. She attended the University of Chicago and taught several years.

This beautiful wedding will be long remembered by the many friends who extend their congratulations and best wishes for "health, wealth and happiness."

Those attending the wedding from out of town were: Mesdames J. E. Watts and Bell McKinney, Mrs. Coleman's mother, of Waco; Miss Inez Friday of Gregory, and Messrs. Rudolph Evers and Leroy Hamilton of Cuero.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman received many beautiful and costly wedding gifts.

YORK-McLENDON.

In an exquisite setting of pink gladiolas and ferns as an effective background, Miss Ann McLendon and Mr. Edwin York plighted their nuptial troth at the Ben Arnold Methodist church on Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

This wedding stands out prominently both families having large connections and a wealth of friends throughout the State.

Preceding the entrance of the bridal party, with Miss Annie Yardley at the Piano, Miss Hattie Stanford sang "Believe Me" and "Because." Miss Yardley wore a brown crepe meteor dress with a corsage of pink rose buds, while Miss Stanford's dress was of crepe rumaino and she wore a corsage of yellow rose buds.

The first notes of Lohengren gave the signal for the entrance of the wedding party.

Rev. Ira F. Key led the way and took his place at the altar.

Following him were Messrs. Bradberry and Crittenden as groomsmen. Miss Stanford remained at the altar as maid.

The bride entered on the arm of the groom. She was becomingly gowned in a one piece dress of midnight blue poiret twill with silver trimmings and hat to match. For something old she wore a handsomely carved brooch, an heirloom of her grandmother's. Her corsage was of sweethear buds and lilies of the valley.

The beautiful ring ceremony was read to the soft strain of Schubert's Serenade.

The reception after the wedding at the bride's home was limited to the wedding party, relatives and out of town guests. Punch was served from a bower of ferns and trailing vines.

A beautiful array of gifts attested the popularity of the bride and groom and wishes for their future happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. York left for an over land trip to Dallas and other points north.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. McLendon and has many lovely attributes of character. She was a member of the '16 class at Southwestern and since that time has continued study in the Martin Fowkes Haun School of Expression and Dramatic Art besides teaching in the Waco and other schools.

The groom is the son of Mrs. C. S. York of Dallas and a young man of sterling qualities. He is a prominent business man of Cameron.

The bride gave touching thought to the memory of her grandmother, who passed away a few years ago by leaving her bouquet at her grandmother's tomb.

Out of town guests for the wedding besides members from Cameron included:

Mrs. C. S. York, Miss Jewel York, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Higgins of Dallas, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Kendrick, Annie D. and Ernestine Hendrick of Waco, Mrs. Charles Strauss and Jack Strauss of Rosebud, Mrs. Story and daughter of Lott, Mrs. Heiser, Mrs. John Mote and daughter of Lorena, Mrs. Hasbriek of Oklahoma City, Miss Hattie Stanford of Austin and Mr. Homer McLendon, Fort Worth.

A NIGHT ON THE RIVER.

Last Thursday night Mr. William Rogers took eighteen boys out to the river in Aunt Lizzie Wilson's pasture.

They took a couple of cooks with them and camped a night and day with nothing to do but fish, swim and eat. Mr. Rogers in order to be sure that none of the crowd was lost, called the roll every few hours and located each of the boys.

DINNER FOR BRIDAL PARTY.

Last Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coleman gave a dinner to the bridal party of their daughter, Miss Estelle. The home was beautifully decorated with queen's wreath and zinnias. The table was in the shape of a T. On each corner was a crystal basket of queen's wreath. The centerpiece was appropriate for the occasion. Two kewpies dressed as bride and groom stood at the altar placed on a reflector which was encircled with queen's wreath. Around this were six crystal candlesticks tied with pink maline and holding lighted candles which cast a soft light over the table and the places of the guests, who had found their places by means of bride and groom place cards.

Mrs. George Mangum, assisted by Misses Olive and Agnes Henderson served the following menu:

Fruit Cocktail
Pressed Chicken Potato Chips
Cream peas in ramkins
Olives Ice tea.
Fruit salad Sandwiches.
Angel food Cake
Pink and white Brick cream.

Those seated at the table were Miss Estelle Coleman, Mr. Seal Evers; Miss Sallie Coleman, Mr. Rudolph Evers; Mr. and Mrs. Coleman; Rev. and Mrs. Henry McFadyen; Mr. and Mrs. Alex Triggs; Miss Inez Friday, Mr. Jim Coleman; Miss Clara Thomas, Mr. Leroy Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Medsker and daughter, Mrs. J. E. Watts, and Mr. Joe Denson.

YORK-McLENDON.

A wedding of great interest to Cameron people was that of Mr. Edwin York of this city and Miss Ann McLendon of Ben Arnold, which was solemnized Wednesday morning of last week at 9:40 o'clock in the Methodist church at Ben Arnold.

The church had been beautifully decorated in ferns and gladiola; by loving hands. Messrs. C. W. Bradberry and O. B. Crittenden acted as ushers.

Just before the bridal party arrived, Miss Haslett of Waco sang two appropriate songs with Miss Annie Yardley at the organ. The bride and groom entered together and stood beside the Rev. Ira F. Key of Cameron who very sweetly and solemnly pronounced them one.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McLendon.

The bride's parents and the groom's mother and sister, Mrs. Robert York, Miss Jewel York and Mrs. Robert Higgins and Mr. Higgins, all of Dallas, stood in the receiving line.

The bride's cake made a beautiful centerpiece for the dining table.

Miss Mary Sue Denson served punch from a beautifully decorated table on the porch.

Mr. York is a highly esteemed young man of Cameron. Is a young man of excellent character and is employed by the Hubert Hefley Motor Company.

Mrs. York was reared in Ben Arnold and is an attractive and talented young lady.

Mr. and Mrs. York were the recipients of a number of handsome presents, among them a set of imported China from the groom's family and a chest of silver from the Hefley Motor Company.

COMPLIMENTARY DINNER.

Mr. Hubert Hefley entertained all of the men of his store in honor of Mr. Edwin York Tuesday evening of last week.

Mrs. Hefley had a sumptuous chicken dinner at eight o'clock. The men at the store surprised Mr. York very much with a number of impromptu toasts, etc., after which a Ford car was rolled in just laden with useful articles with jokes, bits of verses and good will attached.

Mr. York was completely surprised but made a very pretty and appropriate response of thanks to his fellow workers.

A GIRL'S FACE IS HER FORTUNE

Because it is the greatest of all womanly charms, a skin which is fresh, smooth, and alluring with the radiance of health, predicts a happy future.

Don't be content to have a lifeless, sallow and blemished complexion—begin at once to remedy these defects.

Every girl can have a beautiful attractive skin if she will only learn to give it proper care.

Thorough cleansing with a fine mild soap once a day, is the secret. Coldcream is beneficial when applied to a clean skin, and rouge and powder are harmless beautifiers—but start clean every day on a clean foundation.

Keep your skin active and it will be clear, fresh, youthful and attractive.

Soap to be thorough need not be harsh. The mildest toilet soap is the most thorough of cleansers, as you will know after you try Palmolive.

Its mildness and thoroughness are due to the same source—the scientific blending of Palm and Olive oils, the natural cleansers discovered thousands of years ago in ancient Egypt and made use of by Cleopatra.

Palmolive freshens, livens and stimulates the skin, leaving it delightfully fresh and rosy.

You can buy Palmolive Soap at all first class groceries and drug stores.

A Wish

"I HAVE TAKEN Cardui for run-down, worn-out condition, nervousness and sleeplessness, and I was weak too," says Mrs. Silvie Estes, of Jennings, Okla. "Cardui did me just lots of good—so much that I gave it to my daughter. She complained of a soreness in her sides and back. She took three bottles of Cardui and her condition was much better."

"We have lived here, near Jennings, for 26 years, and now we have our own home in town. I have had to work pretty hard, as this country wasn't built up, and it made it hard on us."

"I WISH I could tell weak women of Cardui—the medicine that helped give me the strength to go on and do my work." This card fulfils her wish.

PAY SAND FREE FROM SHALE IS FOUND IN MINERVA

LEE OIL COMPANY BRINGS IN BEST PRODUCER OF THE FIELD.

Developments in the Milam county field has been active in the past week there has been more interest in both the shallow and deep tests in the county than for some time. The feature of the week in the shallow area was the drilling of the best well, in the history of Minerva field by the Lee Oil Company on the Nelious lease, at something around 700 feet about 8 feet of solid pay sand was drilled into which is something unusual, as the sands in the other wells has been more or less mixed with shale. The well is the number 11 of the Lee Company and is estimated will make over 50 barrels daily when placed on the pump.

News that will be of interest to the oil fraternity is the announcement, that the Lee Company are preparing to drill a test well to around the 1600 feet in the Minerva field, in an attempt to 2000 foot level on the Nelious lease in uncovering the large productive sands that is believed underlies the shallow pay. The drilling of this well will be done immediately and 36 days will complete the job.

After a lull in drilling operations for some time the Owens Petroleum Co., is starting operations again, and are moving rig and machinery on a location for the drilling of number 8 Henry. Number 9 and 19 location will be drilled as fast as possible.

The production of the Minerva field has now reached around the 400 barrel mark according to the increased production of the field in the past week.

The deep test area is humming again, scores of oil field men scouts, geologists and representatives of some of the large companies, are in this territory working over the different structures in the county. The S. A. Guiberson, Jr., number one Posey well, which has been shut down for some time, is nearly ready to be drilled to the lower levels. It is said the well will be drilled to the 4000 foot level if necessary to uncover the gusher pay.

Hundreds of acres of leases are being blocked in the county for deep tests, some of the operators predict that a new field will be uncovered here soon, the larger companies are watching Milam county and nothing is being overlooked by their eagle eyes.

A location has been made in the vicinity of Sharp for the drilling of a deep test. The location was made by A. F. Ballard for his principals.

CAMERON MAN FOUGHT DUEL ON BEACH IN GALVESTON 50 YEARS AGO.

Here is an interesting account of a duel fought 50 years ago on the beach at Galveston between an island dweller and a Cameron man. This was published in the Galveston News under the column "50 years ago today." The details here presented were given John M. Tucker of Cameron this week in a letter from The News. Mr. Tucker is the oldest man now living in Cameron who was here 50 years ago and recalls the Galveston duel:

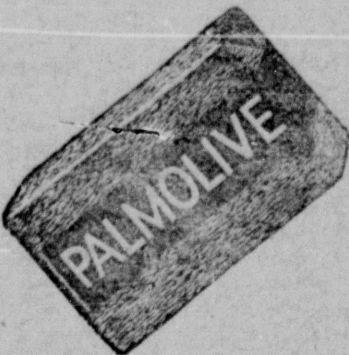

From The Galveston Daily News, Friday, August 16, 1872.

A duel came off about 9 o'clock last night on the beach between Dick Cotton of Cameron and a gentleman of this city whom we are not permitted to name. The duel grew out of an old feud—a difficulty that took place in the army during the war.

It seems, from the best information we could get, that Cotton had severely beaten the other party in a manner that was regarded as unfair, and upon his having met Cotton today upon the street, he slapped his face, which resulted in a duel.

The parties fired at thirty paces, three times each, with six-shooters, resulting in the wounding of Cotton in the knee, and the other party in the shoulder.

Neither of the parties are regarded as dangerously wounded.

CLEOPATRA WASHED HER FACE THIS WAY

She used Palm and Olive oils, the same rare oils, which are blended in Palmolive. She knew that to have a fresh fine skin, thorough cleansing was necessary. The crude combination of Palm and Olive oils which was the best that even royalty could then obtain is now brought to perfection in Palmolive.

The girl of today, if she would be beautiful, follows Cleopatra's practice. Every day she cleanses the skin thoroughly with mild Palmolive Soap. Never does she permit cold cream, rouge and powder to accumulate and clog the pores of the skin. She knows that this starts irritation and blackheads, pimples and other blemishes result.

Palmolive with its mild creamy lather is lotion-like in its action. It freshens, revives and stimulates and leaves the skin delightfully fresh and rosy.

Thus a great luxury may be enjoyed at the price of ordinary soap. You can pay more, but you can't get a finer, milder cleanser.

You can buy Palmolive Soap at all first class groceries and drug stores.

MEAT INSPECTION REQUIRED BY CITY IN NEW ORDINANCE

MARSHAL LUCAS MADE INSPECTOR—IS MOVE FOR BETTER MEAT HERE.

Inspection of all animals slaughtered for sale in the City of Cameron is provided for by ordinance passed at the meeting of the City Council Tuesday night.

This ordinance actively championed by Dr. T. G. VanZant, city health officer, makes it the duty of the city marshal to inspect all animals killed for meat sold in the city and having carried the emergency clause was passed at the meeting Tuesday night so as to become effective immediately. Mr. Lucas has begun the enforcement of the ordinance.

The ordinance which is published in full text is a move for better meat and insures the consumer against meat from animals whose condition is unfit for slaughter for food and will be welcomed as a food measure by the housewives of Cameron.

In addition to the passage of this ordinance, an ordinance was passed placing the burden of expense in installing water meters on the Cameron Water Power & Light Company. A meter system installed in Cameron by the company will be installed at the expense of the company with the exception of meter rent of 25 cents per month which will be born by the consumer as is the custom.

Dr. T. G. VanZant, city health officer, will begin plans at once on instructions from the city council, to provide for the inspection of dairy herds from which the city milk supply comes. This will be done in conjunction with the A. & M. College. As a pure food measure and to protect milk consumers against milk from tubercular herds, this health program by Dr. VanZant will find universal approval among the people.

As a means of protecting the playground equipment at the City Park the council has asked City Marshal Vince Lucas to appoint a park commissioner to give police protection in the park. Abuse of the playground equipment has been free on the part of some but the city has taken this means to insure respect for its property which in turn is the property of all the people. The playground equipment together with all other public property will be protected by police power to be appointed by the marshal.

All persons caught damaging this property will be arrested and prosecuted. Protection for the property was asked by the Civic League through its president Mrs. J. G. Vest, and upon the recommendation by members of the council. This city in granting this protection hopes it will not be necessary to prosecute but will do so if necessary to insure safety of the equipment.

9. The Wedding 50 Years Ago—By C. M. Beard.

To tell of this Golden Wedding properly one would have to begin fifty years ago and as the writer was not present this narration will of necessity be incomplete. For more than three years the principals in this pleasing celebration have been planning it more or less in detail, for the past several months have been making active preparations. Guests were invited from all over the state, some of whom began to arrive a week or more before the appointed day. It was their purpose to invite everyone who they thought would like to be present. Old friends were impressed with their earnest desire for their presence, and it was made known that any excuses would have to be better than those rendered to the host on the occasion of the marriage feast related Biblically. But on this occasion old friends, neighbors and kinsmen were as willing to assist in the celebration as the host and hostess were anxious to have them.

Food and refreshments were started in preparation days in advance in order that there should be plenty. Ample shades, seats and picnic tables were prepared and ready. The arriving guests were met by sons and daughters and made welcome. During most of the morning conversation and sociability between old friends and neighbors was the order. There being many from a distance old friend and neighbors were confronted by old friends and neighbor of years past. Among the older set much animation was in evidence at the meeting of the boys and girls of yester-years. All too soon it became evident that the noon hour was creeping up, but in order that it might be a little different from the neighborly visits of the years past a bit of a program was rendered. Some songs were sung, including, "Silver Hairs Among the Gold," "Will the Circle be Unbroken," etc. Little Thanna Ragan, a sweet little five-year-old granddaughter, presented the wedding ring of orange blossoms in gold to the bride of half a century past in behalf of that gallant swain who is now her grandfather. The marriage certificate as signed and filed at the time of that first dedication was read by Rev. T. J. Lockhart, a nephew. Prayer followed and guests were assembled and photographed.

As to the dinner there were two calves and two goats barbecued, besides heaps of cakes, pies and such like delicacies. Iced water, tea, coffee and lemonade were served according to the various tastes. Our genial Judge Jeff T. Kemp said there was plenty.

Cigars were passed among the men and an hour of contented conversation followed. Then there were other songs including "Standing on the Promises," "Nothing Between," and "If I Could Hear My Mother's Prayer." "Sweet Bye and Bye," etc. Then followed the cutting of forty or fifty of those famous Tom Watson melons raised on the enexcellent sandy lands of Milam county. After more photographs Hon. C. M. Beard, former representative of this county, related the impressions made upon his mind by that bride and groom of half a century ago, how, altho joyous in each others companionship, yet they realized the solemnity of the occasion with such clarity as has made the union durable and filled their lives with satisfaction and happiness. Mr. Beard took occasion to thank those who had promoted the celebration, and suggested that it would be carried, together with the account of the original wedding, in the minds of the children there for another half century, thus projecting from mouth to ear, the story of this wedding for a full century.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham are the parents of nine children, seven of whom are living. They have twenty-six grandchildren, all of whom are living. All of the living children and all of the grandchildren save two were present. The surviving children are:

Mrs. L. H. Geick, Chriseman; Mrs. Robert Ragan, Rotan; Mrs. A. R. Hensley, Tahoka; N. W. Graham, Ozona; H. E. Graham, Cameron; A. R. Graham, Milano and O. D. Graham of Thorndale.

All unexpected to host or hostess many wonderful presents were given, which they declare, beautiful and valuable tho they are, shall serve them best, in keeping ever present those golden memories of kindred and friends.

ANTI-K DEMOCRATS MAY BOLT PARTY

CALL CONVENTION TO NAME
CANDIDATE TO OPPOSE MAYFIELD.

Dallas, Sept. 10.—The convention of Anti-Klan Democrats from all sections of the United States to nominate a candidate for United States Senator against Earle B. Mayfield will be held in Dallas Saturday, Sept. 16. That announcement was made by Barry Miller Saturday afternoon.

Miller said he was authorized at the San Antonio convention by the Anti-Klan Democrats to feel out the situation over the State and if that feeling showed another man was wanted, to call the meeting. He said he has received word from leaders all over the State urging him to call the meeting.

Today it was said the list of possible candidates to run against Mayfield is growing. The list now includes Harry L. Seay, Judge Rice Maxey, Henry D. Lindsley, Joseph W. Bailey, Watt Gregory, Albert Burleson and Cone Johnson.

The Republicans, it was understood, will meet in Dallas on the same day. It could not be learned if they will attend the conference of Democrats, but it was understood a representative of the Republican would be at the meeting.

The call sent out for the convention was signed by men and women prominent in political affairs from many points in Texas. The signers are:

Barry Miller, Dallas; Henry D. Lindsley, Dallas; Mrs. Walter S. Baker, Waco; Rev. John G. Anderson, Garwood; H. E. Ellis, Denison; J. R. Handy, Denison; Joe Edmondson, Richland; Sam J. Hunter, Fort Worth; Chas. B. Stewart, Fort Worth; John L. Wortham, Houston; R. M. Johnson, Houston; J. W. Flynn, Fort Worth; H. M. Smith, Fort Worth; Dr. E. D. Ward, Hillsboro; Sid Crumpton, Texarkana; J. V. Guleke, Amarillo; Thos. D. Glover, San Antonio; Joe H. Eagle, Houston; John H. Kirby, Houston; John M. Cobb, Houston; Geo. E. B. Pandy, Houston; Geo. A. Hill, Jr., Houston; K. E. Choate, Houston; J. H. Dallas; O. E. Dunlap, Waxahachie; Jordan Campbell, San Antonio; G. L. Eidson, San Antonio; E. O. Prosser, San Antonio; G. R. Smith, McKinney; W. L. Sargent, Fort Worth; Scott Woodward, Fort Worth; A. J. Bell, San Antonio; C. F. Greenwood, Dallas.

The signed call sets out that Earle B. Mayfield, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, is a nominee of the Ku Klux Klan and adds: "The Ku Klux Klan is a political party, the aims of which is to seize the reins of government, National, State, county and city, and it refuses to take the Democratic party into its confidence. It meets behind closed doors and employs secret methods for carrying out its political programs in spite of the fact that the Democratic party has repeatedly declared that a secret political party in a free country is dangerous to the liberties of the people."

The signed call accuses the Ku Klux Klan of attempting to control State conventions by sending its members to county and precinct conventions for the purpose of electing its own delegates, and also accuses it of running the recent convention at San Antonio. "Public debate was prohibited," it says, "Freedom of speech was ignored and the rights of Democrats to be heard on questions of vital importance to the State were stifled."

In its preamble the call says:

"We feel that a time has been reached in the history of our State and party that calls for inflexible determination. The Declaration of Independence declares that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and happiness, and that to secure these ends, Government is instituted among men, deriving all its just powers from the consent of the governed. Our Federal Constitution seeks to safeguard these rights and provides, among other things, that no religious test shall even be prescribed in this country; that no man shall be deprived of life, liberty or property except by due course of the law of the land, that every accused person shall be entitled to a fair and public trial in open court by an impartial jury; shall be confronted with the witnesses against him, and shall not be tried except upon an indictment or complaint, and that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."

In conclusion, it appeals to both Democratic men and women to have the courage of their convictions and to act promptly "and rise up in their might and save the State for the future of the Democratic party."

Washington advices describing the interest displayed at the national capital in the fight of Mayfield mention Cone Johnson as the "best man" to oppose him.

A Washington dispatch says:

"The Texas colony is looking hopefully to the anti-Klan convention at Dallas where a fusion candidate may be picked to beat Earle B. Mayfield, Democratic Klan candidate for the Senate. The withdrawal of Dr. E. P. Wilmont as Republican senatorial candidate, Texans believe, will give an opportunity to erase the stain of the Klan. The names of some of the truly big men in Texas are being mentioned for that duty. Because of their 'damp' leanings, however, former Senator Joseph W. Bailey and former Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson are not likely to be nominated as Texas is overwhelmingly dry. Cone Johnson is regarded as the best bet. He is a lawyer of ability has a clean record and is respected throughout the State. He is a forceful speaker and as the late Ollie James of Kentucky remarked after watching Mr. Johnson in action at the Baltimore convention in 1913, 'He's got a wind-up like a dinky preacher.'"

PARENTS! THAT SON OR DAUGHTER—WHAT ABOUT THEIR FUTURE?

Their ability to think, to do, to act, according to the laws of a well trained mind will measure their success and prominence.

How to get the most of this important training in the shortest time and at the least cost, is the question that a catalogue, from America's largest Business Training School will answer.

Whenever a group of parents get together, whether it be at home, church or picnic and the question comes up as to the kind of an education to give a boy or girl, some well informed parent or patron of the Tyler Commercial College, Tyler, Texas, will tell of the advantages of this famous institution and what wonderful results its students accomplish at small expense. Read in our catalogue the endorsements from parents who have patronized this institution, and note what they say as to the thoroughness of our training, and the moral surroundings of the students while in school. Read the many endorsements from former students showing their success. Read the endorsements of business men who employed our graduates. Read the description of our extensive practical courses of study, and you will see that the Tyler Commercial College ranks among the foremost educational institutions of the country. Cameron Schools Open Monday

The Yoe High School opened Monday September 12 for the new term. Above is shown the new Yoe High School given to the City of Cameron by the late Mrs. Carrie Yoe and her husband C. H. Yoe. It is one of the finest high school buildings in the state. In the upper left is L. H. Kidd, superintendent and in the lower right is Dr. A. S. Epperson, president of the board of trustees. The grammar school will also open on Monday September 12 with Prof. Dick Brewer as superintendent. The Yoe High School has one of the best equipped commercial departments in the state and last year saw a number graduate from this department which is maintained by the Lawless Green estate. It is hoped that the board of trustees will devise some means of improving the campus of this building as the service of a landscape artist is necessary to the proper survey and improvement of the grounds.

FAILURE TO RAISE MONEY MAY BREAK UP CAMERON BAND

CLUB AT LOSS WHAT TO ADVISE
—TAX MAY BE ONLY SO-LUTION OF PROBLEM.

Failure of the Commercial Club to advise definitely about a financial program for band may break up this organization in Cameron, it was shown by discussion at the club Friday night and the passage of a motion emphasizing the inability of the club to say definitely what it will do.

The loss of the band will be a great calamity to the city and the situation demands immediate action.

Directors meeting of the Cameron Commercial Club, Friday night, September 8th, 1922:

Roll call showed the following present:

Officers—Robert McLane, president; W. W. Chambers, vice president; J. C. Tucker, treasurer; W. B. Skelton, secretary.

Directors—J. W. Coleman, J. T. Parma, O. M. Smith, Dr. Jas. Watson, John E. Mangum, C. W. Lawrence, H. M. Hefley.

Committee Chairmen—C. W. Bradbury, W. M. Cobb, K. G. Gillis.

Minutes of previous meeting were read and upon motion adopted.

John E. Mangum reported taking the old desk from the community house in the Wilson-Ledbetter Park, cleaning it up and selling it, the net proceeds of the sale being $18. As a member of the Civic Improvement Committee he asked permission to use this money in moving the community house to a more appropriate spot in the park. Upon motion from J. W. Coleman, seconded by J. C. Tucker, this permission was granted.

The subject of maintaining the Cameron Concert Band for another year and retaining Mr. P. H. Medsker as leader came in for much discussion. Everyone seemed to be in favor of keeping the band and Mr. Medsker, the doubtful part being the club's ability to raise sufficient funds to maintain the band for a year and to pay the present deficiency. The fact was brought out that the club could not definitely act on the matter until the Band committee could work the city and see how much could be secured. However, motion from J. W. Coleman, seconded by Dr. Watson, the secretary was instructed to advise Mr. Medsker with regards that it could definitely advise him about the matter immediately and that it did not want to stand in the way of him accepting another position on this uncertainty.

T. Parma called attention of the club to the bad condition of the city streets and suggested that more attention be given them. The fact was brought out that these streets are being repaired as rapidly as possible.

W. M. Cobb reported the tents for five stock show ordered, also that he was figuring with a first class carnival for the dates of the fair and that other plans were working smoothly.

EVEN CAREFUL
CALOMEL USERS
ARE SALIVATED.

Next Dose of Treacherous Drug May Start Misery for You.

Calomel is dangerous. It may salivate you and make you suffer fearfully from soreness of gums, tenderness of jaws and teeth, swollen tongue and excessive saliva dribbling from the mouth. Don't trust calomel. It is mercury; quicksilver.

If you feel bilious, headache, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of combustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush the Kidneys at once when Backache or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Put Good Material In Your Building

IT WILL LAST LONGER
AND COST LESS FOR REPAIRS.

Many people make the mistake of economizing too closely in the lumber and other materials that go into the construction of a new building. There is but one result, and that is QUICK REPAIRS AND MANY OF THEM.

We strongly advise the use of only the best grades of well seasoned lumber and other materials of like quality. The slight increase in cost will be offset many times over by the absence of repair bills.

We sell lumber and other materials that meet expectations, and our prices on everything are reasonable.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE— DRINK HOT TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking up a cold.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

RUB RHEUMATISM FROM STIFF ACHING JOINTS

Rub Soreness from joints and muscles with a small trial bottle of old St. Jacobs Oil

Stop "dosing" Rheumatism. It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right in the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain. "St. Jacobs Oil" is harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache, neuralgia.

Lumber up! Get a 35 cent bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

Sec. 10A. Any person who shall, either directly or indirectly, sell, offer for sale, or possess for the purpose of sale or offering for sale any carcass or body, or any portion of any sheep, goat or hog, without first having in his possession a certificate of slaughter duly issued and signed by the Animal Inspector of the City of Cameron, covering the animal which, or a portion of which, is sold, offered for sale, or possessed for the purpose of sale or offering for sale, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in sum not less than one dollar and not more than one hundred dollars.

Sec. 11. Nothing in this ordinance shall be construed to require the inspection hereunder of any animal raised, slaughtered and sold by the owner thereof incidentally, the said seller not then and there engaging in the butcher or meat-selling business as an occupation.

Sec. 12. The fact that animal flesh that is unwholesome and unfit

A Wish

"I HAVE TAKEN Cardui for run-down, worn-out condition, nervousness and sleeplessness, and I was weak too," says Mrs. Silvie Estes, of Jennings, Okla. "Cardui did me just lots of good—so much that I gave it to my daughter. She complained of a soreness in her sides and back. She took three bottles of Cardui and her condition was much better."

"We have lived here, near Jennings, for 26 years, and now we have our own home in town. I have had to work pretty hard, as this country wasn't built up, and it made it hard on us."

"I WISH I could tell weak women of Cardui—the medicine that helped give me the strength to go on and do my work." This card fulfills her wish.

A WORLD ON WHEELS

What would happen today if every automobile in the world were destroyed?

It would be a greater catastrophe than the stoppage of all railroads. So completely is our everyday life on a motorized basis that it is beyond the comprehension of any single individual to analyze the disaster that would follow the loss of motor-driven vehicles.

Probably the first general and most far-reaching consequence would be the interruption in the world's business of feeding itself.

From the very preparation of the productive soil on through delivery of crops to market centers, then to manufacturing and shipping industries and finally to the producer by devious progressive merchandising steps, the civilized world, and particularly the United States, is more dependent upon motor transportation than it has ever been compelled to realize.

Localize the same problem. Consider the merchant. He solicits and delivers over a great circle of trade what would be impossible without automobiles. His trading radius is extended beyond his actual solicitation because the automobile enables buyers to reach his place of business at their facilities that have almost no limiting factors as to speed or distance are no less important sales arguments than quality and price of goods on his counters.

In the growth of the world's social and industrial structure tremendous strides have been made since the inception of the automobile. Of course this has not been entirely because of the motor car, but history proves that the betterment of mankind, the progress of civilization, has always been in direct ratio to the improveed methods of transportation. Pre-historic man found his life offering undreamed possibilities when the first wogan with round stones for wheels was conceived. And yet as his era of civilization progressed it found that there were still greater needs for better transportation.

From that day to this, mankind has ever sought better transportation for himself and his family, better means of moving his worldly possessions, easier ways of gaining the necessities and some of the luxuries of his day. Improved transportation has been the obvious means.

History records few far-reaching developments toward the betterment of man during the centuries that water and land travel was difficult, limited dependent upon the elements.

What would be the condition of the world today if modern transportation had been at the service of the Father of Christianity?

Inventions, discovery of new principles in science, all such factors in the onward march of progress were virtually stifled by the difficulties of transportation and its corollary, communication.

Steam brought us boats and railways. Civilization advanced at a pace hitherto unknown.

Recall the every day life of twenty years ago. Compare it with your life today. Even through travel was easier over long distances, individual transportation for short distances was still a problem.

The automobile has changed modern life perhaps more completely than any other development in transportation yet known. Literally, we live in a world on wheels.

FORD AUTOMOBILES LEAD IN NUMBER

LOCAL COMPANY GIVING WIDE USE TO TRUCKS AND TRACTORS.

Ever popular as a modern transportation unit the Ford Automobile, Truck and Tractor, find wide use in Milam county through the sales and distributing Agency of the Hubert Hefley Motor Company of Cameron.

The Company is selling Fords at a rapid rate as has been true of the firm since its organization, then and now one of the leading automobile firms in Central Texas.

In addition to the sale of automobiles the company distributes Good-year and Oldfield Tires and sells oil and gasoline.

Quite a program of education has been carried on by this company in the sale and use of the Fordson tractor on the farms of the county. Motorizing the farm to solve power problems of the farmer is perhaps the greatest prospect in the motor world today.

Mr. Hefley is now showing the new 1923 model Fords with many distinct improvement over the old models.

CAMERON BATTERY SERVICE STATION BIG ASSET TO MOTORING IN COUNTY.

The Cameron Battery Service Station in Cameron, Jack Owens, proprietor, has become one of the big factors in the automobile and tire and oil industries in this county.

In addition to the filling station, selling Milam county oils and gas, the station maintains a battery service station and sells tires and tubes.

Mr. Owens came to Cameron in 1921 and established the first drive in filling station in Cameron. Since that time he has had a remarkable growth in his business and is looking forward to an increase this fall.

The accessory business of Mr. Owens has grown as has his oil and gas sales. Motorists find the Milam county gas and oils giving entire satisfaction and many are showing their preference for the home products.

THE BUICK MODEL 23-SIX-44 TWO-PASSENGER ROADSTER

Conservative in line and color, refined in every detail of comfort and convenience, powerful beyond the demands of service, the Buick Model 44 Roadster has for several seasons enjoyed a prestige well-deserved. For 1923 this car is even more desirable, because it is a still better motor car in point of appearance and performance.

Like all the other Buick models, the Roadster has been redesigned. While the wheelbase is the same—118 inches—the car looks longer and fleetier, because the body and top have been lowered and the contour of the hood and rear deck has been changed, as well as the tilt of the spare tire carrier.

Within, a number of improvements are immediately apparent. The trimming at the sides of the seat is piped, instead of being plain, and the sides of the body are trimmed clear up out of sight under the cowl.

The seat has been lowered at a more comfortable angle, giving the ideal sitting position with restful support for the back.

The trim top carries a still larger plate glass window in the rear, in a nickled frame six inches high and twenty-four inches wide. The steering wheel position is lower and more comfortable, and the lengthened control lever is more conveniently grasped.

Not a tack is exposed to view throughout the upholstery, all being concealed by the patented binding. The door pockets are larger and all trimming on the doors is padded. Dovetails in the doors prevent rattle as well as undue wear on the locks, and door jam plates insure against undue wear on the rubber bumpers. The door hinges are heavier and more durable. Even the threshold plates are delicately etched, purely for appearance.

There is a complete new dash equipment, with black indicators on white dials with glass faces.

There are new drum type headlights and parking lights; new read fender wings extending over the ends of the gasoline tank; nickled scuff plates on the running boards; new hood catches; new type crowned fenders.

The spring suspension is new and much improved.

The new windshield is adjusted from the inside, even with curtains up. The side curtains are new, with split lights and signal pocket for the driver's left hand. There is a ventilator in the cowl, adjustable from the dash. There is an effective windshield wiper mounted on the windshield frame, with an improved rubber strip between upper and lower glasses.

The transmission carries a theft lock endorsed by the underwriters, operated by the same Yale key that locks the ignition switch.

In short, the Model 44 is a new and finer Roadster, from filler cap to the flush rear deck door. Its mechanical improvements are on a par with its refinements, making it the best Roadster of the type ever built by Buick.

BIG-SIX
TOURING

$1650

THE dependability of the Studebaker Big-Six is due to correct design, the use of the best materials money can buy and the highest standard of workmanship.

Studebaker stands in absolute control of the quality of the materials at all times, because Studebaker makes in its own plants such vital parts as motors, transmissions, axles, frames, bodies, tops, castings, forgings, stampings, etc. The parts-makers' profits on such items are, therefore, eliminated and only one manufacturing profit is included in Studebaker prices.

The Big-Six is distinctive in appearance with its handsome body and many refinements. It offers genuine comfort through its long semi-elliptic springs, restful 9-inch seat cushions, fine upholstery and shock absorbers. It is economical to buy and own, and enjoys a high resale value.

The new price of $1650 for the Big-Six Touring car is the lowest at which it has ever sold. Yet the quality is actually better than ever and this means a value that is duplicated nowhere else in the field of fine cars. You won't find greater satisfaction at any price.

The Big-Six Touring car provides ample room for seven. When not in use the auxiliary seats fold neatly out of sight—always ready for instant use when you need them.

The name Studebaker is our greatest asset and your best protection.

NOTED WOMAN DRIVER BUYS FAMOUS ESSEX

"BEAR OF A CAR YET, AFTER 80,000 MILES, SHE TELLS DISTRIBUTOR."

Three years after Marjorie Dougan became famous as the central figure in probably the most gruelling automobile test ever made, the production of "The Trail of the Arrow" moving picture, she amazed Harold L. Arnold, Hudson-Essex distributor at Los Angeles, by walking into his private office the other day and asking him how much he wanted for the old "S-X Arrow" which she had driven across the Mojave Desert wastes in Southeastern California in to the depths of the Devil's Punch Bowl.

"The old Arrow," gasped Arnold. "Why Marjorie, that car has traveled almost 80,000 miles and been hammered and racked worse than any other automobile on the American continent."

"I know it," calmly replied the young woman. "Why shouldn't I? Wasn't it I that gave it the hardest part of that hammering. But I've just given it the once-over and got the boys in your service department to let me take it out for a short test run, and I want to tell you right here, Mister, that it's a bear of a car yet. I think you'll agree with me that nobody else is half as much entitled to that old Arrow as myself."

"Well," musingly commented the distributor, "merely as a matter of sentiment you certainly are right. In any event, I don't know of any one else whom I should like to see get that car half so well as yourself. Name your own figures and it's yours."

Miss Dougan placed so high a value on the car that Arnold was surprised then sat down, drew her check in payment and drove away with the car, half the big automobile distributing organization cheering her departure.

The hazardous descent of the "S-X Arrow" into the Devil's Punch Bowl, as depicted on the screen, has been shown to film audiences throughout the United States and in many other countries over the world, and never fails to excite the utmost amazement wherever exhibited, not only that any automobile could undergo treatment so rough without being totally wrecked, but that a mere girl could exhibit the strength, nerve and masterful driving skill which marked the production of the film.

Because of her bravery and mastery of the car, Miss Dougan has been called on by several other automobile firms to help produce their films.

For this reason, perhaps the greatest tribute ever paid an automobile by any one anywhere was when this intrepid young woman, after her wealth of experience as a driver, saw fit to purchase the car in which she first attained fame after it had run up a total mileage of almost 80,000.

JULY BEATS BEST PREVIOUS JULY BY 53 PER CENT.

Hooray for July! It has continued the record-breaking pace set by the previous six months this year and, like most of its predecessors, has hung up a new record which it will take a better organization to beat.

July, 1920 was the best month this company ever had—until April, 1922, came along. Every month since then has beaten that big July, last month's sales exceeding the former champ by 53 per cent. And just to show its reckless disregard for records, July 1922, at the same time smashed old July 1921, a knock-out punch by exceeding that month's sales to the tune of 417 per cent.

These figures indicate that Chevrolet sales are far and away ahead of those for the industry as a whole, because shipping reports compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce show that July of this year beat the best previous July (in 1920) by only 20 per cent. Chevrolet sales for July therefore exceed the average by 33 per cent.

The N.A.C.C. figures show July of this year beating July of last year by 39 per cent, while Chevrolet sales for the same months show a variation of 417 per cent. We therefore top the average in this comparison by 378 per cent—a really remarkable showing.

Another fine showing is made by Chevrolet in 1922 through the fact that our sales for the first seven months of this year exceed those for the whole of 1920, our banner year.

OAKLAND MODELS ARE POPULAR HERE

COMFORT AND CONVENIENCE OF OWNER GIVEN FIRST THOUGHT.

The new 1923 Oakland series of cars are distinctly new. They are deeper in body lines and larger in appearance. The distinctive Oakland streamline has been enhanced by the new sweeping full crown fenders which are wider, heavier and extend over the wheels in a deeper arc.

The lowering of the running board an inch and a half, combined with the new full crown fenders and running board shield, are mainly responsible for the full appearance of grace and power which sets this new series apart as the most distinctive the Oakland Motor Car company has ever turned.

The comfort and convenience of the owner has evidently been uppermost in the minds of the engineers, judging by the mechanical changes and improvements noted in these new models. For instance there is a lever for dimming lights mounted on the top of the steering column. This is a distinct innovation in the automobile world. In fact, the Oakland is the first car to have a headlight dimming apparatus mounted on the top of the steering column. This lever may be operated by the thumb and without moving the hands from the steering wheel. When the amount of night driving now being done is taken into consideration, the value of such a device can not be over-estimated.

Another innovation, particularly for a car in the low-priced field, is the new hand control for spark and throttle mounted on the steering wheel, a type declared to be superior to the quadrant. Gear shifting levers have been lengthened considerably to allow for shifting with a minimum effort.

To provide for quick starting winter and summer, a new improved Marvel carburetor and Oakland manifold has been adopted. This new carburetion system has a heat control working automatically with the throttle, insuring a uniform mixture the year round under all weather conditions. A new Hemy, distributor, with a semi-automatic advance and retard feature, cares for all spark adjustment inside the breaker box in place of the entire distributor head moving.

The new steering wheels are considerably more dished than those on the previous models, permitting easy reach of the greater number of controls now on the steering column.

Each of the models is powered with the Oakland overhead valve engine built in the Oakland plants and each carries the famous 15,000-mile written guarantee announced for the first time with the 1922 Oakland models.

Special Oakland-built aluminum alloy pistons, oil-sealing piston rings, honed-cylinder walls, special bronze-lack interchangeable bearings for the engine crankshaft, silent chain drive are some of the other mechanical features of the latest Oaklands. The lubricating system is of the forced speed and splash system, guaranteeing proper oiling at all speeds and under all conditions.

Drum type headlights add a touch of distinction, and nickel plating is used on the radiator and other parts of the car where it will add most to the appearance. Rear windows and windshield are of plate glass and in the closed models there is plate glass throughout. Heater, rear-view mirror windshield wiper and snubbers are furnished in coupe and sedan.

A host of changes have been made and additional equipment has been placed on the Sport car. The body is low and racy, painted light maroon and upholstered in brown Spanish leather. There are new style drum type headlights, nickel plated with cowl and tail lamps to match; heavy nicked radiator, with special radiator cross bar cap and motometer; trunk bars in rear; plate glass wind deflectors; rear view mirror; windshield cleaner; running board protectors; running board step mats; disc wheels with demountable rims; walnut instrument board with glass covered, silver-faced instruments; khaki top, leather bound; khaki windshield visor.

Price on these new models range from $975 to $1545 at factory.

ROAD CAPACITY ONLY LIMIT TO AUTO BUILDING.

Detroit, August 15, 1922—Colin Campbell, General Sales Manager of Chevrolet Motor Company, recently expressed some interesting views regarding the future of the automobile. He said, "It must now be clear to all citizens that the only 'saturation point' of this industry is the capacity of the highways. All estimates of staticians were based on the so-called purchasing power of the unmotorized man. That is why they proved wrong."

"Man's principal capital is Time. Most of his time is used in moving himself or the product of his efforts. "Any utility that enables him to transport himself or his products two to four times faster, increases the value of his time, and his producing and earning power in the same ratio."

"Thus the motorized man pays for economical transportation out of the increased earning power resulting from it."

"Realizing that food, clothing, shelter and transportation are the four essentials of modern civilization, public opinion is now centered on the improvement of highways and in securing minimum mileage and maintenance costs in modernized motor transportation."

"Automobile manufacturers who meet public requirements in modern economical transportation are assured of continuous, satisfactory volume of business."

THE "GALLOWS PLANT"

Credited already with two fiendish, weird murders and innumerable minor crimes of perversion at San Antonio, marihuana, a wild weed growing in Southwest Texas and smoked widely by Mexican peons, has been nicknamed the "gallows plant."

The two marihuana smokers under death sentence are Clemente Apolinar and Frank Cadena, both Mexicans, convicted of two of the most horrible murders ever committed in Texas.

Apolinar, 29, killed Theodore Bernhard, 14, several months ago while the lad and his younger brother were sailing toy boats at a spring. The Mexican without warning killed the youth with a rock. Kirby Bernhard, 11, escaped while his brother was being murdered.

Cadena, 30, ex-soldier, shot Pablita Jimenez, beautiful 18-year-old senorita, while she lay asleep in her bed the afternoon of April 14. For half an hour after he had fired three shots into the girl's body, Cadena stood at the foot of the bed with the smoking revolver in his hand, muttering he had done nothing. Pablita's sister, paralyzed with horror, witnessed the strange death vigil. When arrested his only explanation in his sworn statement was, "I killed her because I loved her."

In Cadena's trial, the defense was temporary insanity caused by smoking marihuana. Considerable testimony was offered, including that of physicians, to establish that the main effect of smoking the wild weed was to arouse the homicidal instinct. In the Apolinar trial, the defense relied on the insanity plea also, which was refuted by the prosecution. Investigating officers were unable to discover any motive for the slaying of the youth by Apolinar other than the fact that the Mexican's mind was poisoned by the fumes of the marihuana leaf.

Innumerable minor crimes have arisen at San Antonio which police ascribe to the use of marihuana. Whenever a strange offense is committed, the officers inquire first whether the prisoner is a marihuana smoker.

Old police officers say that marihuana has been smoked by Mexicans since time immemorial. It was first noticed in San Antonio's immediate locality about fifteen years ago, previously having been used widely along the Mexican border. Tradition has it that the Indians indulged in its use, and often employed it as a stimulant while on the warpath.

Recently San Antonio passed a city ordinance—on the heels of the Apolinar case—prohibiting the smoking of marihuana. Police court averages from one to three marihuana addicts a day. Police Judge Rochester almost without exception imposes the maximum penalty in such cases.

Marihuana is not the well known loco weed, although sometimes given that name. The leaves, small stems and flowers of the plant are dried, crumbled into pieces like tobacco, and smoked in cigarettes. It strongly resembles green tea when dried.

From addicts, it has been learned that the smoking of marihuana at first has a sedative effect and produces dreams which vie in their imaginative quality with those of an Edgar Allan Poe or a Thomas De Quincy.

An unexplainable feature of the smoking of marihuana is its treachery. Harmless in its apparent influence for a time, it suddenly arouses the murder instinct in the brain of the addict. And then comes a fiendish slaying or an attempt to accomplish a murder regardless of all consequences.

Local authorities predict that the weed in time will be outlawed by the federal government as morphine, cocaine and opium are at the present time.

Rastus—I was jest testin' mah will power, jedge. Dat's all.

PIGS IS PIGS.

A judge, in delivering the charge to the jury, said:

"Gentlemen, you have heard the evidence. The indictment says the prisoner was arrested for stealing pigs. The offense seems to be getting a common one."

"The time is coming when this must be put a stop to—otherwise, gentlemen, we shall none of us be safe."

WRONG ADDRESS.

A traveling man received the following telegram from his wife:

"Twins arrived tonight. More by mail."

He went at once to the nearest telegraph office and sent the following reply:

"I leave for home tonight. If more come by mail, send 'em to the Dead Letter Office."

A TRUE FISH STORY.

A naturalist, writes James B. Thorsen in one of his clever insurance letters, once divided an aquarium with a clear glass partition. He put a lusty bass in one section and minnows in the other.

The bass struck every time a minnow approached the glass partition. After three days of fruitless lunging, which netted him only bruises, he ceased his efforts and subsisted on the food that was dropped in.

Then the naturalist removed the glass partition. The minnows swam all around the bass, but he did not strike at a single one. He had been thoroughly sold on the idea that business was bad.

There is a moral here if we need it—take another shot at the glass partition. Maybe it isn't there any more.

UNCLE SI MORALIZES.

Uncle Si Perkins moved his chair to keep pace with the creeping shade of the store awning and resumed his discussion of the divorce problem.

"When I was a little chap," said he, "my pa had a practice o' buyin' sugar by the barrel. When a new barrel was fetched home, he'd tell us chaps to dig in an' eat all we could hold, an' we done it. Once we got filled up, we didn't want no mo' sugar fo' a spell an' he knowed we wouldn't be stealin' it."

"Gittin' fed up is what makes this here divo'ce business. Love is kind o' like excitement. It's mighty thrillin' fo' a while, but it ca'ms down after a bit. When married folks gits to naggin' at one another, the ain't nothin' wrong except they done got fed up. Keep 'em apart fo' a month an' they'll kiss like they done on the honeymoon."

"Lots o' folks gits a divo'ce when all they needs is a vacation."

RECKLESS.

Sam sold Mose a mule. A few days later Mose told Sam the mule was blind.

"Whut makes yo' think dat mule is blind?"

"When I se turned 'em loose in de field he ran smack-dab into a tree."

"Mose, dat mule ain't blind. He jest don't gib a dern."

PACEMAKER.

An old backwoodsman had just got to the depot as the train was pulling out, so he ran down the track after it, disappearing around the curve. About five minutes later he came walking back. A station loafer said: "Uncle, did you catch her?" He said: "No, but I made her puff like h—l."

OUT!

During the progress of a colored baseball game down South, a tall, lean colored man was umpire and a little fellow was up to bat. The umpire called: "Ball foh. You're out."

The little fellow excitedly howled: "What yo' mean? I se out?"

"Yo' all heard me," exclaimed the umpire. "De bases am full and I se got no place ter put yo'."

A NEW WEAPON.

John and Jimmie, two American soldiers, were wounded in France and sent to a French hospital. They were only a few beds apart.

One day a beautiful French nurse came in. Going over to John's bed she asked: "Well, my dear, how many Germans did you kill?" John answered, "I killed three." "Which hand did you kill them with?" "With my right," came the answer. Bending over she kissed John's right hand three times.

Then the nurse walked over to Jimmie's bed and said, "Well, my dear, how many Germans did you kill?" "Thirty," Jimmie answered quickly.

"Which hand did you kill them with?" "Lady," Jimmie answered, "I bit them to death."

A flea was biting a watchdog's tail. The dog lay watching a distant sail; On the distant ship the mate at the rail, Turned his field glass to the shore line pale;

Then the radio sparked with the distant hail:

"Tell that dog there's a flea on the end of his tail!"

GOOD WISHES.

A couple of Irishmen who had not been long in this country met at an inn and called for dinner. As it happened there was a glass of horseradish grated for dinner. Pat, thinking it was something to be eaten with a spoon, put a large spoonful into his mouth. The tears immediately filled his eyes and rolled down his cheeks. His companion saw it and said: "Pat, what's the matter?" "I was just thinking of my poor father that was hanged in ole Ireland," answered Pat. But Jimmy soon filled his mouth with the same and as the tears gushed from his eyes also, Pat says: "What's the matter? What has happened to ye?" "Ah," says Jim, "I was just thinking what a pity it was that you were not hanged when your father was."

AUTO HINTS

Don't purchase a used car without receiving a certificate of registration from the former owner.

An excellent compound for coating both the inside and outside of rubber tires is five pounds of whitening stirred into a quart of gasoline.

Never use white lead or other materials containing oil to stop a leak in the gasoline connections. The petrol will dissolve the oil, thereby making the repair useless.

While it is important to have sufficient amount of gasoline in the tank, enough oil and water in the engine, and air in the tires, to operate an automobile, it is infinitely more important that the driver should know the speed laws and the rules of the road, and that he has an honest desire to observe them.

Before venturing out in slippery streets with a car, the engine should be in smooth running order; the clutch should disengage easily and freely, and engage without sudden grabbing.

Brown shellac mixed with graphite makes an admirable cement for pipe joints and connections which are subjected to heat and compression. The two ingredients should be mixed to a paste and smeared over the joint needing treatment.

The universal joints are usually covered with leather casings or "boots," which are packed with grease. These boots when in good condition, insure the proper lubrication of the moving parts of the joints, keep out the dirt and grit and aid in making the joints noiseless. It is advisable to inspect those casings once a month.

Seat covers may usually be cleaned very satisfactorily with a nonalkaline soap and warm water. The best way to carry out the job is to take the covers off and give them a good scrubbing on the board.

A piece of sheet metal bent roughly in the shape of a buffalo's horns, with a hole punched in the center so that it will fit under the spout, which is then screwed in place, makes an admirable finger grip and enables the operator to shoot the oil more accurately.

It is important to keep spark plugs clean. The points of the plug, however, seldom need cleaning, but grease and mineral dirt will accumulate on the exterior and interior of the porcelain, so that the current passes that way instead of jumping the gap as intended.

AUTOMOBILE DEATH RATE.

As appalling as the numbers are, the total number of persons killed as a result of automobile accidents is greater than has been shown. A prominent insurance company has gone to the expense and labor of ascertaining the real facts of the case and the result of the investigation is to show that the fatalities are far greater than have been shown in the usual figures. Established rules followed by vital statistics officers require that when an automobile is in collision with another vehicle, any deaths that result are charged to the total caused by the heavier vehicle, and a considerable number of persons who ride and drive in automobiles are killed by collisions with railroad engines and trolley cars, both of which are classed as heavier vehicles.

The figures gathered showed that according to the preliminary statements 1642 policy holders' deaths were classified as due to automobile accidents in 1921. In addition to this number, however, it developed that 65 more were killed in collisions between railroad trains and automobiles and 42 more killed as a result of collisions between trolley cars and automobiles. These 107 deaths added to the 1642 officially classified as deaths in automobile accidents increase the total to 1749 and increase the automobile death rate from 11.0 to 12.7 per 100,000.

This amounts to an increase of 6 1/2 per cent of the total death rate incident to the operation of automobiles.

Postage stamps were invented by a Frenchman, Le Velay, in 1653. They were used for local deliveries in Paris. They were first regularly issued by the British government in 1840.

Europe learned the secret of making paper from the Arabs. Up to that time, all books and documents had been written on parchment and papyrus.

Murderers convicted in Utah may choose between death by hanging and shooting. Lethal gas is used in Nevada.

TEXAS FARM NEWS

The East Texas Poultry Association has settled definitely on a poultry exhibit to be held at Center Nov. 23, 24 and 25.

Four thousand 1 and 2-year-old steers were purchased from the 6666 Ranch owned by the Burk Burnett estate for Iowa farmers.

Farmers in Northeast Texas are laying in wood for their winter fuel in expectation of high prices and coal scarcity the coming winter.

At a demonstration sale of Duroc Jersey sows at Arlington, Joe McLain of Anna sold a sow for $750. Thirty other animals averaged $45 each.

The cotton crop around Smithville, Bastrop county, has opened so fast that cotton picking is very far advanced. The crop is much better than last year.

Farmers in the neighborhood of Lufkin have signed up for 305 acres to be planted in ribbon cane, which will yield approximately 106,750 gallons of syrup.

Farmers in some sections of Nueces county have finished gathering their cotton and are breaking land for next year's crop. Preparations are also being made to plant a few late feed crops.

A survey of the pecan trees in the vicinity of Luling, South Texas, shows that the crop will be a complete failure. The pecan crop last year in this section sold for more money in Luling than did the cotton crop.

At a meeting of the Tulia Chamber of Commerce it was decided to have the Swisher county 1922 Fair held September 15th and 16th. A full program and premium list will be announced later.

The continued dry and hot weather, together with the ravages of the leaf worm, have cut short the cotton crop of Williamson county, one of the banner cotton counties in Texas. However, enough corn was raised in this county for home consumption.

Special sheep scabies quarantine orders to cover Edwards and Val Verde counties is announced by the Live Stock Sanitary Commission of Texas. The special quarantine becomes effective Aug. 10.

Light rains have practically covered all the East and South Plains country. The farmers think these rains will save the maize crop. The hottest weather in thirty-two years has been experienced in the Panhandle.

A number of Ellis county farmers have installed receiving sets and many others are contemplating installation in order that they may listen in on concerts and programs broadcasted from Dallas, Fort Worth and other stations.

It is estimated there has been 40,000 bales of cotton produced in the Rio Grande valley around Brownsville and the picking is about over. Some farmers report the yield of a bale per acre and the price has been satisfactory.

W. Lindsey, who lives six miles southwest of Weatherford, sold a Tom Watson watermelon for $5. It was 39 inches long and weighed 74 pounds. The largest melon of the season that has been marketed at Weatherford weighed 114 pounds, was raised by R. A. Voorhies and sold for $20. Mr. Voorhies makes a specialty of raising Jumbo melons.

Shoemaker & Dublin, shippers of East Texas fruit and vegetables, have compiled a statement on the 1922 tomato shipments. It shows that the average prices were as follows: 4-basket pinks, 52 1/5c; 4-basket greens, 47.7c; 6-basket greens, 61 1/3c. Prices for greens were net, after deducting all charges, including for packages and packing. The 1921 average for pinks was 84 1/4c.

Factors against the East Texas growers were the earliness of the Mississippi crop, which was two weeks ahead of East Texas, and the heavy tonnage, Mississippi shipping 3,600 cars and East Texas 2,000 within a period of sixty days.

The rice acreage this year throughout Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas totals 822,000 acres, as compared with 747,600 acres last year. Galveston rice millers are pleased with the crop prospects for the season.

Committees from the Temple Chamber of Commerce have distributed supplies of arsenate calcium to farmers of Bell county for the purpose of poisoning against cotton leaf and army worms.

A large number of cattle are being shipped from Burnett county to Ohio to be distributed among the farmers. Cattle from this section of Texas are considered very good by feeders in Ohio, and it is believed that next year many loads will be shipped from there.

A machine that snares insects is in operation on the farm of Mrs. John T. Talley, south of Temple. After a thorough trial it gathered in insects at the rate of a tubful per acre. The machine was purchased by a local bank to be used as an experiment for the information and benefit of farmers.

George T. Wright of Paris, who owns a farm on Red River, opposite the mouth of the Kiamitia, has just finished budding 400 pecan trees and expects in a few years to have an extensive orchard in bearing. P. B. Gibbons, also of Paris, who owns a farm on the river in Bowie county, has begun budding 200 pecan trees.

The cotton crop in Delta county of North Texas, one of the smallest counties in the State, will be the largest in yield for several years. At Clarksville in Red River county, the home of the long staple cotton, the cotton leaf worm has done some damage, and cotton picking is now under way in this section. From Dallas north and west in the blacklands the cotton crop for the last two years has been poor, and in some places entirely destroyed by the boll weevil. This year, however, the crop is much better, has developed well and the weevil has done very little damage.

San Saba county has sold 100,000 pounds of wool this season at a price which approximates 40 cents per pound.

The pink bollworm scouts who have been operating in the section around Ennis report that fields of cotton in this part of the state are free of the pests.

"People who go into the poultry business generally find producing market eggs the most profitable as well as the safest branch of poultry keeping," says Mr. F. W. Kazmeier, who has a large poultry plant near Bryan. He is positive that a flock of 200 hens on each farm would return a net profit of not less than $200 a year, the biggest part of which would be from market eggs.

Tarrant county is claiming the distinction of having the champion girl tomato grower of Texas, and possibly the entire South. Miss Markueite Crane, 13 years old, of the Smithfield Community Club of Tarrant county, has gathered more than 1,300 pounds of tomatoes from her garden plot of one-twentieth of an acre. Miss Crane received a minimum of eight cents per pound for her entire tomato crop.

The Texas Chamber of Commerce of Dallas estimates the cotton crop of Texas at three million bales for this season. The wheat crop at 11,300,000 bushels, and corn crop at 122,000,000 bushels. Approximate productions of other crops are given as follows: Oats, 41,000,000 bushels; barley, 1,800,000 bushels; rice, $5,300,000 bushels; hay, 1,000,000 bales; grain sorghum, 55,000,000 bushels; sweet potatoes, 9,100,000 bushels; rye, 14,000 bushels; apples, 209,000 bushels; peaches, 1,700,000 bushels; pears, 400,000 bushels; sorghum syrup, 2,800,000 gallons; peanuts, 113,000,000 pounds; broom corn, 15,000 tons.

The report indicates the following productions for truck crops: Cabbage, 6,638 carloads; cantaloupes, 125 carloads; tomatoes, 1,650 carloads; watermelons, 9,000 carloads; onions, 3,800 carloads.

No state in the union can excel Texas for variety of crops, even if we do have occasional drouths and floods.

thrasher, or picker, by horse and one man with the use of a cart, instead of the usual method of handling windrow peanuts by several wagons and men to keep the thrasher running, which eliminates quite an expense in this part of the harvesting.

We hope all Texas farmers will adopt the shocking system in harvesting their peanuts, as this will increase the marketing price to them. Buyers can usually pay more for shocked peanuts than peanuts cured by windrows; frequently the cause of the low price for peanuts in Texas has been due to the poor quality resulting from improper methods of harvesting and curing. Buyers are always anxious to pay better prices for better quality of peanuts; it is very difficult to dispose of low grade peanuts to the trade.

And in thrashing, I urge you to have your thrasher men avoid running the thrasher at such speed that it will break the nuts, as this will cause the nuts to be of less value. Also, and this is equally important, in order to obtain the best results it is necessary that the nuts are packed in large merchantable bags and well sewed. Peanuts coming to the market in poor bags, is a loss to both the peanut buyer and peanut producer.

If growers of peanuts want any further information as to the proper harvesting of peanuts, we shall be pleased to hear from them. It is as much to our interest as it is to the growers to have the peanuts come on the market in good condition, as peanuts in damaged condition always bring less money and creates more or less dissatisfaction among the growers and consumers.

THE DELTA COUNTY FARM LABOR UNION expects to handle all of the cotton seed raised by its members through the union this fall.

The Farm Labor union of Wood county, East Texas, has employed J. B. Smith to class cotton this fall. He will divide time between Mineola, Golden and Alba, three important towns of the county. It is freely predicted that the greater portion of East Texas counties will produce an average of a bale to three acres. Last year a bale to ten acres was quite common.

Dry weather has seriously retarded the sweet potato crop in some sections of Texas. Texas produced 8,000,000 bushels of sweet potatoes last year, and it is the general belief that 9,000,000 bushels will be produced this year. There are many potato-curing plants in Texas and a new one was recently completed in Wilbarger county, Northwest Texas. There are at present thirteen incorporated sweet potato growers' associations in various counties, with fifteen others in the process of organization.

Stories for Boys and Girls

"Broke down the Limbs of Trees by Alighting Upon Them."

RUTHLESS SLAUGHTER OF BIRDS.

Gone is the great auk and the passenger pigeon, and going fast are such modern birds as the snowy heron or egret, the wild turkey, the ruffed grouse, the Bob White, or quail, the plover and the wood cock.

The auk was a very large, stout-bodied bird. It had short wings, useless in the air, but well adapted to assist in swimming. One of the largest breeding grounds was Funk Island, on the coast of Newfoundland, whence they migrated by swimming as far south as Virginia. "Vessels plying between the two continents stopped at the breeding place to lay in a supply of fresh meat, eggs and oil, a practice that continued and was carried on in a wasteful manner until the last auk was gone."

The passenger, or wild pigeon, was once so plentiful and flew in such large flocks, that, like a thick, dark cloud, they shut out the sky and broke down the limbs of trees by alighting upon them. Reed, in his "Birds of Eastern North America," says: "The last great nesting place was at Patosky, Mich., in 1878. Nearly every tree in a tract 40 miles long and three to 10 miles wide, contained one or more nests." In the South swine were fattened on the young birds as they fell, or were thrown from the nests by the pigeons crowding together on the trees and breaking down the branches. For years they were killed by the millions for food and shipped in carload lots to the markets of Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston and New York. This wholesale slaughter and destruction was carried on incessantly by men and boys, who not only shot the birds, but trapped them, and in the evening went to their roosting places and killed them with clubs by the thousands, until today there is not a single wild pigeon left in the country, the last one having died September 1, 1914, at the Cincinnati Zoological Gardens, and all this has taken place within the lifetime of the writer.

The snowy heron, or egret, one of our most beautiful birds, has been destroyed for years, until now it is almost exterminated, in order that its long, fine, hair-like feathers might furnish ornaments for women's hats. One plume hunter boasted of killing 300 herons in a "rookery" in one afternoon, and another proudly referred to the fact that he and his companions had killed 130,000 birds—herons, egrets and terns—in one winter, of course, not telling how many young birds they had left to starve to death because there was no mother bird to feed them.

Some one says such a picture should be a continual reminder of man's greed and of woman's vanity, and that a dead bird does not help the appearance of an ugly woman and that a pretty woman needs no such ornament. "The destruction of these beautiful birds," says Chapman in his "Handbook of Birds of Eastern North America," "is a blot on Florida's history."

The wild turkey, the ruffed grouse, or pheasant; the Bob White, or quail; the plover and the wood cock are all by common consent recognized not only as our finest and most delicious game birds, but they are at the same time admired for their beauty and have demonstrated their great economic value to the farmer, the horticulturist and the gardener. Yet these are rapidly disappearing before the ruthless hand of man, and, as Chapman says, in a comparatively few years they will doubtless be found only in the parts of their range which are unfit for the habitation of man.

HOW MARBLES ARE MADE.

Most of the stone marbles used by boys are made in Germany. Only the refuse of the marble quarries is employed, and this is treated in such a way that there is practically no waste. Men are employed to break the stone into small cubes, which are then thrown into a mill consisting of a grooved bed-stone and revolving runner. Water is fed to the mill and the runner is quickly revolved, while the friction does the rest. In half an hour the mill is stopped, and a bushel or so of perfectly rounded marbles is taken out.

Show self-respect and others will respect you; be magnanimous and you will win all hearers; be sincere and men will trust you; be earnest and you will achieve great things; be benevolent and you will be fit to impose your will on others.

A USEFUL ELEPHANT.

An elephant pushing a long line of freight cars was the unusual scene witnessed in a Kansas town recently. A circus was in town, and while the tents were being put up one of the men came in and complained that a dozen empty box-cars were blocking the movement of the wagons, and he could not get a switch-engine to haul them away. The trainer suggested that Rajah, the elephant, be utilized. The brakes were released, Rajah was called up, and understood at once what was expected of him. He put his head against the end car, bracing his big legs, and in a few moments the line of cars began to move. The track was perfectly level, and Rajah, with stately tread, pushed the train 300 yards, well out of the way of the circus.

Never lose an opportunity of seeing anything beautiful. . . . Welcome it in every fair life, every fair sky, every fair flower, and thank Him for it who is the fountain of all loveliness, and drink it simply and earnestly with all your eyes; it is a charmed draught, a cup of blessing.—Charles Kingsley.

MINERAL RESOURCES OF TEXAS.

etation reaches out and covers the surface of the water or nearly so, peat may accumulate very rapidly. Likewise in large swamps such as the great Dismal Swamp, where the water is sufficiently shallow to support timber growth, in places, and yet of such depth as to preserve the fallen trees and leaves, peat may accumulate over a very large area. Another illustration is found in the Everglades of Florida, which previous to partial drainage, supported a dense growth of saw grass. This grass upon falling became submerged in water and formed peat.

Lignite represents a state of carbonization more advanced than that of peat. The lignite beds of today were the peat bogs or swamps of a former age. The numerous and successive lignite beds of the Tertiary formations of Texas record the fact that when these formations were accumulating there existed in the Coastal Plain belt of the state numerous swamps in which peat accumulated. After being formed these peat bogs were further covered up by an accumulation of sediments, and thus sealed from the atmosphere. The peat very slowly underwent a further carbonization, resulting in formation of the lignite beds as we now find them.

The cannel coals of Texas found near the Rio Grande are essentially lignites, that have been altered to cannel coal, owing to some unusual conditions. It has been observed that this coal is more or less saturated with oil and the high fuel value of this cannel coal is doubtless due in part to its petroleum content.

Although more fully carbonized than either lignite or peat, bituminous coal nevertheless retains evidence of its vegetable origin. This evidence is found in the impression of tree trunks and of leaves such as one finds in the coal veins and on the overlying and underlying rock and clay beds. It is known that during what is known as "coal measures" time or the Pennsylvanian age, many extensive swamps were in existence in which flourished a luxuriant vegetation, from which the coal beds were formed. Enough of this vegetation remains in the form of fossilized plants to indicate its essential characteristic, all of the plants differing from these of this present time. In the late Cretaceous time there were swamps in parts of Texas, in which the coal beds already described were accumulated.

The alteration from peat to lignite and to bituminous coal is in part a process of time and in part a result of the conditions to which the deposits are subjected. Thus the cannel coal of the Webb county deposits, having a fuel value of 12,000 B. T. U., is no older in time and in fact somewhat younger than much of the lignite. The high fuel in this case, as already stated, is due to exceptional conditions. As a general rule, however, increased time results in more complete consolidation and carbonization in coal. As a rule the Pennsylvanian coals are of higher fuel values than the Cretaceous or Tertiary coals. Likewise lignite, although known to occur in the Pennsylvanian, is as exceptionally there as is bituminous coal in the more recent or Tertiary deposits.

The publications relating to the Texas coal and lignite deposits are numerous. The early report of the Texas Geological Survey will be found to contain much information on coals. Among these early publications, one volume is devoted to brown coal and lignites. University of Texas Bulletin 189 and 307 relate to the Texas coal and lignite fuels. The bituminous coal of the Pennsylvanian of Texas are described in part 3 of the 22nd annual report of the United States Geological Survey, while the bituminous coal of the Cretaceous and the cannel coal of the Eocene are described in Bulletin 164 and 691 of that survey. The statistics on production previously given are also from the reports of the United States Geological Survey.

THE FRONTIER EDITOR.

For nearly fifty years of his life Major Mose Harris of San Antonio, Texas, who died the other day at the home of his daughter, Mrs. E. A. Henning, in El Paso, was a nomad editor and printer. During most of that time he lived on the very fringe of civilization. He was in his eightieth year when he died, but up to within a few months of the end he was in active newspaper work, as editor and publisher of the Texas Republic in San Antonio.

He learned the printer's trade in Louisville, Ky., and when 18 years old he started West. For many years he moved from one boom town to another, carrying with him what he designated as a "shirt-tail full of type" and an old Washington handpress. When the different lines of railroad were building through the frontier region he always moved a little ahead of the oncoming track, setting up his primitive printing office in the new towns that sprang up along the route. It was in the maelstrom of life in its wildest phases that he saw and participated in more stirring scenes and adventures than perhaps ever fell to the lot of any one man. He was in the midst of excitement in Arkansas City, Dodge City, and a score of other towns in the heyday of their most riotous periods.

When the thrills of a town began to wane Major Harris would load his type and press onto an ox-cart and depart for a new field of action, where the saloon with its sawdust covered floor, its gambling tables, bedraggled bar and motley crowd were a lure for his adventurous spirit.

How many newspapers he started he had no accurate recollection, he was wont to say in his later years. There was hardly a boom town in Kansas, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona and Texas, in the period twenty to fifty years ago, that did not attract him and his little printing plant. In not a few instances he was forced to leave the town of his choice between hours, because of some editorial stand.

Nearly thirty years ago Major Harris was editor and publisher of an evening newspaper in San Antonio. The editor of the Express, the morning paper there, was the late W. C. Brann, famous iconoclast, who afterward killed two men in a triangular street duel in Waco and was himself killed. Harris wrote and published an attack on Brann and the latter armed himself with a pistol and started for Harris' office. In those days Harris never sat with his back toward the door. He saw Brann as he crossed the threshold.

"I know what you have come for, and I have got you covered," he mildly announced.

Brann was taken completely by surprise. He dropped his hands to his side and walked up to Harris.

"Suppose we talk this thing out," he suggested.

Harris lowered the pistol and in a short time they had settled their differences in an amicable way and were friends ever afterward.

Not long before his death Harris was asked what had been his rules for attaining old age.

"I have never followed any rules," he replied. "I took a drink whenever I wanted it, gambled when I felt like it, and turned night into day if there was any fun to be had by doing so. I have always been interested in people—real people, no matter to what strata of life they may have belonged. I numbered among my friends many of the notorious gunmen and man killers, professional gamblers and even down-and-outers that the West and Southwest have produced during the last sixty years, and I found something good in every man of them. I have also had for my friends governors of states, men of great professional and business acumen and success, as well as ministers of the gospel—and I found something good in every man of them. I have found it a pretty good world."

SEPTEMBER FASHIONS.

The last word of Fashion has not yet been pronounced, so that many variations in color effects, lines, and style features appear from month to month in the course of a season.

There is a very noticeable increase in the length and also in the width of skirts, not only in frocks for formal occasion, but also in sports suits, and separate skirts.

The flapper, with knee length skirt, is no longer attractive except to attract attention as behind the fashion, for even the flapper finds that long skirts are becoming to her.

Prints such as grandmother more, dainty georgettes, crepe, chiffons and organdies are among the pretty fabrics now displayed.

The straight full bodiced skirt is used with a fitted bodice, sometimes finished with a bertha of lace.

Dresses of organdy and other sheer fabrics are adorned with flowers of self-material.

Dresses of black, white and beige lace are fashionable for older women's dinner and afternoon dresses. Brilliant ornaments and metal ribbons are used for decoration.

The peasant types of blouses, one-piece dresses with low-busted waists, and bloused coats of silk and sports materials with peasant embroidery, bespeak the Russian style influence.

Lovely embroideries in color are featured for decorations on dark dresses of wool or silk fabrics.

Black is still prominent (although considered passe) for dresses, capes and other wraps. Bindings, facings, borders or linings in some color are used with black.

A cape of black crepe satin is lined with canary crepe de chine, banded with black.

A dance frock of black crepe de chine has a girdle of satin roses in two shades of green, with green foliage, and strings of jade beads.

Plain and brocaded crepe in blue combine well for a draped evening gown.

A pretty afternoon dress of flowered crepe de chine has an underskirt of green crepe, which material is also used for bias folds on tunic and sleeves. A bolt of two strips of narrow velvet ribbons has a trimming of tiny colored pearl buckles.

A very youthful frock of pale yellow and rose figured voile has its straight skirt trimmed with narrow plaitings of rose voile. The bodice is bloused, and from the girdle of rose voile hang four swinging panels.

A chic two-piece suit of Copenhagen sponge is trimmed with bands of beige color French serge.

Tan crepe knit is used for another two-piece suit, showing a skirt with uneven hem lines and a jacket bloused at low waistline.

A dress of dark blue Canton crepe has a vest and flowing sleeves of matched georgette, touches of dark red used as piping give character to this pretty model.

A wonderful sports blouse of white crepe, has deep cape collar portions, showing a hem line of red chain stitching in yarn. Flowers of the yarn and fringe trim a soft girdle of crepe.

Tangerine silk will be pretty with trimming and buttons of blue.

A dress of crepe satin has an oval panel of figured organdy that also matches the waist. A suspender girdle, yoke and collar are also of the satin.

A dress of foulard silk, has loose panels of contrasting taffeta on the skirt. The taffeta is used also for bretelles, collar and cuffs on the blouse.

A tunic blouse of crepe de chine has a border in colored floss stitchery.

Beaded crepe de chine is also nice for such blouses.

Knitted fabrics are very prominent for suits, skirts and blouses.

Jerseys are also used.

The little frocks for informal occasions are lovely in taffeta or silk crepe weaves. In these frocks too the tendency to longer and wider skirts is noticeable. The sleeves may be long or short.

Ribbon is much in vogue for bindings, fluted borders, applique effects and for girdles.

There is a rumor that the old style of Norfolk jacket will return to favor. It is for wear with a straight plain skirt, made of one width of material, lapped and closed at the side or back or front and fitted over the hips.

Blouses of linen and plainly tailored with a mannish neck finish are worn with such a suit.

When the coat and skirt of a costume are of one color, the blouse should be of a lighter tone in the same color.

There is great variety among sleeves, their shaping and finish. Some are long and flaring, others close fitting and plain, or close fitting and wrinkled. There are also peasant sleeves more or less full, and gathered to a band or bands at wrist or elbow.

Charming new draped effects are shown for dresses and skirts. The simple one sided drapery is becoming to both slender and stout figures.

FASTING.

Fasting as a means of purifying the blood and rebuilding health is having a marked effect upon the treatment advised by the more progressive physicians who realize the immense benefits to be obtained by abstinence from food. But all fasts that last longer than several days should only be taken at the suggestion of the family physician or specialist. The correct place to take a regular fast of several weeks' duration is in a sanatorium, where a specialty of this work is made and the patient carefully observed.

A fast of a day or two, remaining quiet at home or a place elected for the occasion, taking nothing save cool or warm water and the juice of a lemon or an orange has proved to be of great value in warding off a bilious attack, or following it. Again, where there are intestinal disturbances, a several days' fast clears the system and allows nature to readjust herself. At such times there should be daily purgatives to free the system of clogging poisons.

After the fast, the juice of several lemons or oranges should be taken, then a little warm milk after an interval of several hours, and a light cereal. Resume normal diet slowly and masticate thoroughly.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

I use the furnace to broil steaks and chops over the coals. This saves gas and keeps the kitchen free of smoke and grease. Meats broiled in this way have a much better flavor than when broiled over gas.

To mend lace put a piece of paper under the lace and stitch on the machine until the hole is filled. Then pick out the paper. Use very fine thread on the sewing machine.

When you buy sliced bacon from which the rind has not been removed try cutting it off with the scissors. It can be done neater and in less time than with a knife; also try cutting noodles with the scissors, and clams for chowder. I have found scissors to be indispensable in the kitchen.

Salt will unclog the holes in a percolator. Pour coarse salt into the coffee holder and scrub the stopped-up perforations both inside and out. Hold it under the hot water faucet until the coffee and salt deposits wash away together.

When making pancakes or fritters for a large family try using two frying pans. This not only saves time but is not nearly as tiresome as waiting until the one pan browns.

Place a large spoon in a pan of rapidly boiling water. Slide egg into spoon first, and after cooking an instant gently slide into bottom of pan. This always prevents the egg from sticking to the pan.

If the knives of your food chopper become dull, run a piece of sandsoap through the chopper as you would a potato. It brightens and sharpens the knives so that they cut like new.

Lettuce can be kept for several days as crisp as if kept on ice by first washing in several waters and then packing in a cold fruit jar. Place the rubber and screw the lid on tight.

To keep juicy pies from getting damp or soggy on the bottom, lay a piece of white paper on the plate and place the pie on the paper. The paper will absorb all the dampness.
